10 Die in Air Liner's Mountain Crash

MISHAP IN UTAH
OF RANGE BEAMPeak Hit by Plane

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 4 (AP).—A United Air Lines plane, lost in a blinding snowstorm, crashed into a mountainside today, killing its 10 occupants, including seven passengers and a crew of three.

Among the victims were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Willson of 1228 South 18th avenue, Maywood, Ill.

S. V. Hall, United Air Lines vice president in charge of western operations, said: "It looks very much as if the accident was caused by a failure of the range or radio beam. Our trip No. 11 reported that the range had irregularities at 5:36 a. m. (mountain standard time)."

Hall said the range was reported "O. K." at 4:24 a. m., but that it evidently failed about the time the San Francisco to Salt Lake City plane, piloted by Capt. Howard Fey of Oakland, approached Salt Lake City.

No Apparent Forewarning.

All indications were that the pilots had no forewarning of their danger. The passengers' safety belts apparently were not fastened.

Although the wheels were torn away, evidence was that the landing gear was retracted at the time of the accident.

The airplane's chronometer, only instrument to show any kind of a reading after the accident, was stopped at 3:39. This was believed to establish definitely the time of the crash, with the probability that it was set for Pacific standard time, an hour earlier than mountain time.

The transport radiocast at about this time that it was 8,000 feet over Layton, 25 miles north of Salt Lake City, and was heading for the airport here. Further efforts to contact the plane were futile.

Wreckage Sighted from Air.

Shortly before noon United Air Lines Pilot William Haws sighted the wreckage from the air.

The wreckage was strewn over a wide area about three miles north-east of Centerville, 10 miles north of Salt Lake City. The Wasatch mountains tower to 7,000 feet in that area. Ground parties struggled thru foot deep snow and tangled underbrush to reach the scene.

Bodies of the passengers and stewardess were piled in a jumble at the front of the cabin. Much of the cabin's furnishings, including some of the seats, had been torn loose and thrown forward.

The nose of the plane, which struck in a grove of scrub oak 250 feet from the top of a ridge and bounced or skidded another 40 feet up the 25 degree slope, was broken away in the crash, exposing the control compartment and leaving in it a mass of twisted instruments.

Pilot Still Strapped to Seat.

Both Pilot Fey and Thomas E. Sandegren, first officer, still strapped to their seats, were thrown 20 feet in front of the wreck.

The plane's left wing was bent back against the fuselage, sheared from the body. Both motors were torn from their nacelles.

Just forward of the passengers' entrance the main body of the plane was snapped nearly in two; the cabin and tail were clinging together only by the metal skin of the fuselage.

The Willsons were returning from a vacation in the west. Willson, who was 24 years old, was a cargo handler for the company. He and Mrs. Willson, who is believed to have been 23, had been married only a few months.

List of Dead Given.

Besides the Willsons, the dead were listed by the airline as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Muir, 4714 Berkshire, Detroit.

E. A. Dybdahl, Fergus Falls, Minn.

George L. Stevenson, Sacramento, Cal.

Joseph Cassero, Oakland, Cal., an uncle of Mrs. Dorothy Norman, 4207 West Gladys street, Chicago, Ill.

Evelyn Sandino, Oakland, Cal., stewardess.

Stevenson was flying to the bed-side of his father who died soon after the plane crashed.

VOTE TODAY THE WAY THE ONES WHO PRESERVED OUR NATION WOULD VOTE

Jail the Crooks
on Spot! Vote
Army Is Told

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

Election judges and clerks who attempt to steal votes or who permit trickery in their polling places today will be removed immediately from their duties and arrested and jailed at once. This was announced last night by County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki as he and the election commissioners completed preparations for today's election.

Three other developments in the city-wide fight for honest elections occurred yesterday. They were:

1. Special agents of the federal bureau of investigation arrived in Chicago from surrounding middle-western cities for election day duty in the so-called "bad wards." The agents will gather evidence for District Attorney J. Albert Wall, who has declared that federal trials loom for election law violators.

2. Squads of volunteer cameramen received their final instructions and assignments to the wards where they will gather pictorial evidence of "repeater" voting and chain balloting frauds, and photograph those whose votes are challenged. Police Commissioner Allman promised special protection for these fraud fighters as well as for polls watchers.

3. Mobilization of the 10,000 volunteers who will observe voting and challenge irregularities in more than 31 of the city's 50 wards. These volunteers—private citizens who rose in revolt against the wholesale vote frauds of the past—will be assigned in groups of 250 to 300 in certain wards. There will be two observers and two volunteer challengers in every precinct in addition to regular party watchers and challengers.

Board Reveals Full Plans.

The full plans of the election commissioners for the voting were disclosed for the first time when Judge Jarecki announced his determination to remove entire election boards where fraud occurs or is suspected. Special squads consisting of police, deputy election commissioners and nonpartisan observers will carry out this part of the program, he said.

"The deputy commissioners will be empowered to remove an entire election board," said the judge. "They will swear in an alternate board and then bring the original board—three judges and two clerks—before me in the election commissioners' offices."

All Officers of Court.

"All these polls officials are my officers and subject to my control at all times. In each instance, regardless of the type of fraud observed or suspected, the displaced board members will be charged with contempt

SHARON, N. H., FIRST
24 TO 7 FOR WILLKIE

Sharon, N. H., Nov. 5, Tuesday (AP).—Racing to be the first in the nation to cast its ballots in the Presidential election, this traditionally Republican town in the Monadnock region of southern New Hampshire announced at 12:12 a. m. today a vote of 24 for Wendell Willkie to 7 for President Roosevelt.

In 1936, Sharon voted 13 to 3 in favor of Alf Landon over the President, and in 1932 the count was 11 for Herbert Hoover to 1 for Mr. Roosevelt.

Exactly one minute past midnight the voters started balloting in the 175 year old colonial red brick schoolhouse on the pine covered slopes of Temple mountain—just four miles from Peterboro, inspiration of Thornton Wilder's play, "Our Town."

By candle and kerosene lamp, the 28 voters—3 others voted by absentee ballot—marked their crosses. In orderly fashion the 12 women and 16 men—some in "Sunday best" others in aprons and overalls—formed two lines. Charles N. Wilson, the town's oldest resident, stood at the head of one line.

The voters hurried in to the seven polling booths and 11 minutes later, the vote was announced.

without fail as I see fit."

The FBI men arrived in answer to a call sent out several days ago after Maurice M. Milligan, special federal prosecutor who will have charge of the department of justice's national vote fraud investigation, conferred here with District Attorney Wall.

Fraud a Federal Matter.

"The federal courts will have jurisdiction over vote frauds in this election," said Wall, "because it involves votes for federal offices—President and congress. The agents are receiving the assistance of trained investigators who know the city and its political workers."

Candid cameras, long range "big berthas" that will be able to operate from windows of homes and apartments near polling booths, and tiny pocket kodaks are among the various types of equipment to be carried by the volunteers who will fight vote frauds with film. Most of them will travel in groups of three or more so that no pictures need be lost thru reloading.

Commissioner Allman promised special police protection for the volunteers last evening in reply to open threats made by Democratic adherents and ward workers that they are prepared to smash cameras and run the volunteers out of their wards. The commissioner said his men will keep the peace even if it means locking up city officials.

Here's What to Do Today if You Encounter Obstacles at Polls

Suppose you are John Doe, a Chicago voter. You plan to go to the polls today and cast your vote, just as you have many times in the past. It is suggested, however, that you read this first. It may help you to save your vote by overcoming obstacles which may confront you. You arrive at the polls and find that thru some error your name does not appear in the precinct binder, the official collection of registration cards for the precinct, bearing the voter's handwriting. It does, however, appear on the printed list of voters.

Affidavits May Be Used.

This being true, you may vote by affidavit. This requires having two householders swear you live in the precinct and have lived there the required length of time for casting your ballot.

If your name has been left off the printed list but appears in the binder you may vote in the regular way, since the binder is the official list. The Watchers may challenge you, but the election judges will uphold your right to vote if the binder carries your name.

If you have moved since registering, but have not moved outside the precinct, you may also vote by affidavit.

No Appeal on Omitted Names.

If, however, your name appears on neither the printed list nor in the precinct binder you can't vote today and there is nothing you can do about it. There is no appeal from precinct election officials in such a case.

Beware of two tricks:

1. You may be told that your eligibility to vote is being questioned. You may be asked to give up your registration receipt and then be told you can't vote without it. Pay no attention to this false advice. Your receipt is not necessary at the polls.

2. Some one may telephone to your home and order that you appear at the election board offices in the city hall, probably at an hour that will make it impossible for you to vote. Pay no attention to such calls.

NEW YORK CROWD
SINGS ITSELF OUT OF CAMPAIGN RIOT

New York, Nov. 4 (Special).—Extra foot and mounted policemen were rushed to Times square tonight as the political tensions engendered by the Presidential election became so taut it threatened to flare into a riot.

More than 5,000 theatergoers were attracted to Roosevelt and Willkie adherents engaged in boisterous and patriotic singing in an attempt to drown each other out.

Singing of the Star Spangled Banner by girls on trucks, silenced the rivals, but they resumed when the song ended.

VOTE —Or Lose It!

1. Vote early.
2. Vote your personal wishes.
3. Remember you are free to vote as you choose. The names of all candidates (except judicial) are on the same ballot. You are not bound by your vote in the primary last April.
4. Mark your crosses carefully. Be sure the lines cross inside the square. If you deface your ballot thru mistake or accident, return it and demand the new one to which the law entitles you.
5. If you are annoyed or molested while voting, appeal to the policeman on duty in the polling place.
6. If you need transportation to your polling place, telephone Republican county headquarters, CENTRAL 7802.
7. If you require election information or wish to make a complaint, telephone the Chicago election commissioners, DEARBORN 3050.

ROOSEVELT ENDS CAMPAIGN WITH PLEA FOR UNITYCloses Address on Prayerful Note.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Franklin Delano Roosevelt tonight closed his campaign to shatter the third term precedent with the confident assertion that America will remain united, no matter who wins the election tomorrow.

The President spoke to the nation by radio from the library of his mother's home on the banks of the Hudson river. His final words to his countrymen were the repetition of a prayer that the nation be kept from ways of evil and maintain its liberties.

Altho his last speech of the campaign avoided partisanship and consisted of an appeal to Americans to exercise their franchise to vote in the interests of democracy, Mr. Roosevelt issued two strongly political statements.

Assails G. O. P. Circulars.

One blasted his Republican opposition for "unethical and deliberate misrepresentation of fact" in issuing circulars stating that a bill before congress would deprive school teachers and state and municipal employees of their pensions.

The second thanked those who had shown their confidence in the administration by working for the third term and asserted that he awaited the verdict of the electorate tomorrow "in full confidence of the vindication of the principles and policies on which we have fought the campaign."

The polemic statements were not included in his final speech. The radio speech wound up a day of campaigning by the President in his home area, where he always has been a political prophet without votes. He delivered four speeches during a 90 mile drive thru the Hudson valley and a fifth at a Democratic rally in the heart of neighboring Poughkeepsie. At the latter meeting attendance was cut down by a rival Republican parade at the same hour.

Disavows Fourth Term.

In the course of his tour the President repeated the promise he made in his final major political address at Cleveland that he would not run for a fourth term. He made the promise by implication, telling his neighbors at Beacon, N. Y., that this would be the last time he would visit that area as a candidate for office.

Mr. Roosevelt took occasion during the tour to work against the candidacy of his congressman, Rep. Hamilton Fish (R. N. Y.) an old political foe. He made the campaign swing thru Dutchess, Ulster, Orange and Putnam counties in company with Fish's Democratic opponent, Hardy Steeholm.

The President's radio address was part of a two hour Democratic broadcast, which brought Democratic candidates and leaders to microphones in all parts of the nation. Among those speakers were Secretary of State Cordell Hull; Henry A. Wallace, Democratic nominee for the Vice Presidency; Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, and Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York.

[Details of this program will be found on page 6.]

Decision Put to Voters.

Discussing the election in his portion of the broadcast, Mr. Roosevelt said the final question each voter should ask himself is "Whom do I think is the candidate best qualified?" adding that the right of such a choice constitutes "the most powerful safeguard of our democracy" and will "always keep the people free."

"The American people and the cause of democracy owe a great debt to the very many who have worked in an honorable way on each side in this campaign," he said. "I know that after tomorrow they will all continue to cooperate in the service of democracy; to think about it, to talk about it and to work for it."

"Tomorrow you will decide for yourselves how the legislative and executive branches of the government of your country are to be run during their next terms and by whom."

"After the ballots are counted, the real rulers of this country will have had their say, as they have had it

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

With the final radio appeals of President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie ringing in their ears, the American people will go to the polls today to make the most momentous decision in our time.

The count of the ballots tonight in 48 states will determine whether we are to continue on the course charted by Mr. Roosevelt in foreign policy and in our domestic economy or are to take the different road of destiny marked out by Mr. Willkie. All signs point to a close election, so far at least as the popular vote is concerned. New York, with 47 electoral votes, is the pivotal state. As goes New York so will go the nation. And in New York it is a neck and neck horse race between Willkie and Roosevelt.

More than 50 million men and women, it is estimated, will decide the issue at the polls, the largest electorate in history, functioning in one of the few remaining democracies in the world. The estimated vote is nearly five million greater than in 1936.

Three Issues Stand Out.

A multitude of issues has influenced the electorate in reaching a decision in this plebiscite, which has split parties and factions and divided racial, religious, and economic groups. But the issues all boil down into three which will be uppermost in the minds of the voters as they enter the polling booths and choose between Roosevelt and Willkie. These paramount questions are:

1. Is Franklin Roosevelt or Wendell Willkie the more likely to keep the country out of war?
2. Is it wise to depart from the national tradition forbidding a third term to any President as a safeguard against the establishment of a dictatorship in this country?
3. Shall the New Deal be allowed a third attempt to end the depression by its socialistic measures or shall Mr. Willkie be commissioned to carry out his program to restore prosperity thru encouragement and expansion of free, private enterprise?

Weather Regarded Factor.

From all parts of the country on the eve of this crucial election there came evidence of the depths to which the souls of men and women have been stirred by the questions brought to the fore in the campaign. Not the least interesting of these phenomena is that relating to election day weather.

Rain, snow, and colder temperatures have been predicted for today in large areas of the northern states in which the election will be decided. Inclement weather of any kind is traditionally known as "Democratic weather" for the reason that it causes many voters to stay at home in the Republican rural regions, where distances to polling places are much greater than in the Democratic big cities. Rain upstate today in closely contested and pivotal New York might keep enough Republican farm-

Willkie's Stand

In his final pronouncements in the closing hours of the campaign Wendell Willkie reiterated and emphasized his stand on the three great issues of the election.

1. Concerning the restoration of prosperity, he said: "When millions of our people are unemployed we cannot hope to be as healthy or vigorous as we would be if everybody were at work. Everybody in America must have a real job with real pay. Once more I say to you, only the productive can be strong, and only the strong can be free."

2. Of war he said in a message to, to women: "My every act as President will be to keep this country out of foreign wars and to keep it at peace. I promise not to send your husbands and sons and brothers to death on a European or Asiatic battlefield."

3. He stated of the third term: "If to the terrible concentration of power in the hands of the third term candidate, and the subversion of the other departments of government, there is to be added continual tenure of office, then the last step in the destruction of our democracy has been taken."

New York, Nov. 5, Tuesday.—As the hour of midnight turned upon election day, Wendell L. Willkie made a dramatic last appeal to the American people from the stage of the Ritz theater early this morning. While a yelling, wildly enthusiastic audience applauded him, he made this theater a stage for the entire people, talking into the radio an hour after President Roosevelt had made his own appeal from his Hyde Park home.

Willkie's address was part of a great nation-wide radio rally in which many prominent persons took part. [Details of what the other speakers said will be found on page 6.]

"The Republican Presidential nominee confined his appeal largely to the subject of unity. He took the famous words of Abraham Lincoln, uttered in Illinois shortly before another great crisis in national history—a house divided cannot stand. 'United we stand, divided we fall,' said Willkie, as the crowd chanted the famous words, 'We want Willkie!'

'Let's Unite Again'

"Let us once again be a united nation" was the final word of the Republican nominee as he left for his hotel to await the decision of the people today.

Willkie had planned to give his national broadcast at his hotel room, but the mounting excitement of the evening, the reports that kept coming to him from all over the nation, perhaps the habit of attending big night political rallies, was too much for him, and he went over to the theater shortly after midnight.

Here was the pulse of the nation unfolding, reports coming from many states, with chairman Joseph W. Martin Jr., of the Republican national committee wielding the gavel as he did at Philadelphia. It was a new sort of a convention and, in the opinion of the Willkie people, would have the same result it did in Philadelphia—a steadily mounting tide of opinion that would sweep him on to victory.

Praise for Martin.

"People of America," said Willkie, "thank you very much. I doubt if in all the history of American politics any campaign has been managed with more integrity and ability than this one by Joe Martin."

"To him and the millions of Americans who have rallied to this cause, I give my very great thanks."

"This cause to me is the most sacred cause in all the world. It is the preservation of the free way of life in America. That free way of life can be preserved only if we become a united people. For seven and a half years we have had discord, and we are having discord at a time when we look across the seas and see how discord and weakness from within have caused the democracies of Europe to collapse under totalitarianism.

"Deep Dedication."
"I cannot say anything to you about how well I have led this crusade. But no man in all the history of time has ever felt a deeper dedication, or a greater sense of obligation to a cause, than I have felt for this cause which I lead."

The crowd was roused to a high pitch of excitement at this point and yelled for two or three minutes before permitting Willkie to continue. "We want Willkie," they chanted in a steady, rhythmic beat of sound that sounded like the galleries of Philadelphia.

"And we must win," continued Willkie, when his voice could be heard again.
"We must win!"
"We must win this cause tomorrow," he said. "Tomorrow (which was already today) we will carry this crusade to the point where we can begin to save and preserve the liberty of this great, beloved country of ours."

The crowd again beat him down with the roar of its applause. "Remember one thing," said Willkie at the end, "this is not the end, but the beginning, of our crusade." Earlier in the day Willkie had spoken twice over the radio, once to the women of America and once to the Associated Willkie clubs, which have been such a new and dynamic force in this campaign. His special plea to these workers was to get out the vote. Only in this way, he said, could America be saved. Go thru storm and rain and go any distance, in order to vote, Willkie implored. Only in this way, he told them, could the processes of democracy be expressed.

He reminded the voters that their vote was secret, and told them to vote according to their own conscience. With this verdict he was content to rest, he said, knowing that it must be true and right.

SUPPORT G. O. P., A DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE ASKS

The strangest candidate in today's election is Orville J. Lane, Democratic candidate for coroner in Lake county. In three-column paid advertisements published in Waukegan's two newspapers, Lane urged the voters of Lake county to disregard his candidacy and vote the straight Republican ticket. His Republican opponent, Dr. John L. Taylor, has been coroner for 40 years.

Lane stated in his advertisement that it was his "sincere opinion that the third term is dangerous in any case and particularly so because Franklin D. Roosevelt has built up a tremendous political machine that will lead the country into dictatorship if it has four more years in office."

Lane said that he was put on the primary ballot without opposition by Democratic county bosses last April when he was employed for a period of three months by the state highway department. Just after the primary he obtained a job as chauffeur to J. N. Whipple, a stock broker, of 1318 Elm Tree road, Lake Forest. He said he never wanted to run, but was put up merely to fill out the ticket, and that he has never done any campaigning.

The excitement of the political campaign pervaded even the hairdressing world last night. At the monthly meeting of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers' association in the Hotel Sherman Miss Eugenia Bauerle, 230 North Michigan avenue, won top honors in coiffure competition with a creation called "The Campaign Pompadour." More than 50 other hairdressers competed in the contest.

Within ourselves, we need fear no aggressor. We have proved time after time that our system of free enterprise and human rights can outdo any other system. We can build stronger industries, healthier human beings, and—if necessary to defend ourselves—mightier armies.

"It is only when democracy weakens from within that dictators and other aggressors begin to look successful. Of course, when our industries are idle or sluggish, it is easy for Hitler, or some other dictator to outstrip us in the production of airplanes or almost anything else. When millions of our people are unemployed we cannot hope to be as healthy or as vigorous as we would be if everybody were at work. Everybody in America must have a real job with real pay. Once more I say to you, only the productive can be strong, and only the strong can be free."

"Apathy Undermines Liberty."
"The greatest danger to democracy is that the citizens themselves, who have the final authority, may become careless about it. They become used to its benefits and take them for granted. They also take for granted many of our democratic institutions. They forget that such institutions must be constantly guarded. Apathy undermines liberty."

"Democracy can't be neglected, fellow Americans. It doesn't just take care of itself. You must take care of it."

"For instance, tomorrow, it is your sacred duty to vote. I say this, irrespective of which side you are on. Democracy lives in your vote, and can live only so long as you vote. Don't leave it up to the other fellow."

"This duty is so sacred that you must not allow little obstacles to prevent you from performing it."

On Adverse Weather.
"Don't let bad weather, for instance, stand between you and the chance to make democracy live. The issue may depend upon whether or not you are willing to take a trip thru rain or snow to the polling place."

"Yes, democracy can be weakened by careless neglect. It can also be weakened by false arguments. I do not mean that such arguments are intended to mislead you. The persons who make them may be entirely sincere. But you must be constantly on your guard against arguments that seek to persuade you that a democratic tradition should be sacrificed for the sake of something else.

"For instance, the argument that you should distrust aside the tradition against a third term on the grounds that we are faced with an international crisis—that argument is a false and dangerous one. To trust aside that tradition is to assume that only one man has the ability to take us through such emergencies. That means that democracy must surrender in the face of any trouble. It means that whenever our government says it sees an emergency, we must forego our democratic institutions until the government is pleased to return them to us."

Way of Dictatorship.
"Let us remember that dictatorship always begins by asking the people to give up some law or tradition for some special reason. The reason given may even seem logical. The motives behind it may be honorable and sincere. But if you give in to such reasons, little by little the structure of democracy is taken away from you without your realizing it."

There is still another way by which democracy may be weakened from within and emergency. That is, by the use of force. In the United States our voting is absolutely secret. There is no possible way for anyone to find out how you vote. No one knows that, save you and your God."

"Voting is a solemn act. Don't vote the way some one tells you to vote. Don't let any one high-pressure you. If democracy is to live in America you must vote the way you believe. I say this to you no matter which way you may choose to vote."

"Remember also, that you can vote any way you please, no matter in what party you are registered. Democrats, for instance, can vote our ticket. Millions upon millions of them are going to do so."

Thanks Democratic Backers.
"I want to take this opportunity especially to thank those Democrats who are supporting me so actively, and with such a fine understanding of the real principles of democracy. Your own party has been kidnapped by a few men who have accumulated too much personal power. We welcome you to our crusade. We believe in a two-party system. In joining with us to fight the New Deal kidnapers, you are strengthening your own party by preserving your form of government."

"Those are some of the reasons why tomorrow is such an important day. When you wake up tomorrow, think of what has been going on in the rest of the world. We have seen the democracies grow weak, so that they could not resist their enemies. Only England has been able to defend herself. And remember how she has defended herself. Facing with her great crisis, she changed her government. Chamberlain, who was prime minister, had had the most experience in government and foreign affairs. Yet the people of England deliberately chose a new government because they wanted a strong government, a strong England. They knew that efficiency was more important than mere experience."

Made No Deals.
"I tell you truthfully that I stand before you tonight without any commitments or deals. I have made no cabaret offers to any one. I have no secret understandings. And I have authorized no man to discuss commitments or understandings in my name. Those who have joined our cause have come in on exactly the same basis as all of you—because they believe in it."

"America has given birth to many great men, but none greater than George Washington, Robert E. Lee, and Abraham Lincoln. These men all had one quality in common—a quality of magnanimity of charity and of tolerance."

"Lee said: 'I have fought against the people of the North because I believe they were seeking to wrest from the South its dearest rights. But I have never cherished toward

TRIPLETS BORN; WILLKIE GETS 3 NAMESAKES

New York, Nov. 4 (Special).—Wendell L. Willkie always will be a name to conjure with at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cuttita.

At the New York infirmary for women and children, Mrs. Cuttita tonight gave birth to triplets and the parents didn't think twice about what to name them.

The first born, a girl weighing 5 pounds 11 ounces, was called Wendy. The second baby, also a girl, was called Louise. (Willkie's middle name is Lewis.) Louise weighed 5 pounds 7 ounces.

When the masculine member of the trio arrived, he was named Willkie. His weight was 6 pounds 2 1/2 ounces. Wendy, Louise, Willkie, and their mother are "doing nicely."

WILLKIE TELLS MOTHERS HE'LL MAINTAIN PEACE

Makes a Stirring Stand

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
New York, Nov. 4.—Wendell Willkie today to help him carry out his purpose "to keep America out of war and to preserve American values."

"I know about war at first hand," Willkie said. "I hate war. I saw the damage done by war at home and abroad—the loss of security and the extinction of civil liberties even in this land of the free. I have not forgotten that lesson."

"My every act as President will be to keep this country out of foreign wars and to keep it at peace. I promise not to send your husbands and sons and brothers to death on a European or Asiatic battlefield."

Urges All to Vote.

The Republican nominee spent the day in his personal headquarters preparing his talks and receiving friends. First of the day's speeches was the address to the women.

"In this crusade to keep America free," Willkie began, "the men and women of these United States have worked side by side, partners in our struggle to make the processes of our democracy work. And yours is a full share in the victory that will be ours."

"I speak to you very humbly. It is men, not women, who build sweatshops. It is men, not women, who have fought abolition of child labor.
It is men, not women, who in the past have fomented wars and ruined the peace of the world."

"It is customary to say that women have built this country along side their men. And, of course, it's true.
No farm can function without a woman. Industry has come to depend in many ways on women. And where would American business be without women?"

"Above all, where you have been given a chance, you have given us the happiest, most comfortable, most enlightened homes in all the world.
You have tried to open yourselves the doors to every sort of opportunity.
I want America to open these doors further."

Equality with Men.

"Here in America, under the law, women have equality with men in politics, in government, and in public affairs."

"You apply the same reasoning and thought to our common affairs. Thru your vote, you exercise the same control over our government. You are giving distinguished service in office and as private citizens to your local communities, your states, and the nation. I want that door of opportunity opened wider."

"I have the strongest personal reason for this feeling. Back in the days when women could not vote, when business and professional opportunities for women were almost unknown, my mother became a lawyer. She did this because she wanted to share my father's life fully. She wanted to guide and inspire her children. She wanted to be able to support herself, and, if necessary, us. She wanted to take an effective place in her community."

Many Women Workers.

"But also she gave time to public concerns her family was always her first responsibility. Within our home she kept alive all the precious things that make family life wholesome."

"Women have always been alert to the social changes that have taken place in our country. And they have been vigorous in stressing the social needs made necessary by such changes. In the period of our most rapid industrial expansion, many of these social needs were neglected.
Today we all expect business and industry to bear certain social obligations in the life of the nation and the community in which they function.
That is now national policy, and in establishing that policy the women of America played a major part.

"There are many millions of women working for their living.
About one out of every four gainfully employed workers is a woman.
These workers have a direct personal interest in the maintenance of our social gains. In addition, there are 29 million families in America."

"Every woman who keeps those households intact wants to know that the business which employs her husband or her son is responsibly concerned in his permanent security.
Women have demanded and obtained safety laws in factories and offices where they and their men work."

Adequate Pay Envelopes.

"Today you want to know that your right, and the right of your men to organize in labor unions is respected."

"You want to know that your health and theirs will not be undermined by excessively long working hours."

"You want to know that the pay envelopes you both bring home will be adequate to meet your needs and the growing needs of your families."

"I stand with you in the support of the social gains already made."

"As chief executive of this nation,
I shall see that American industry recognizes your needs and their responsibilities. In a prosperous country we cannot only maintain these gains. We can, and we will, extend them."

"We have a great national defense effort ahead of us. That defense effort will have only one object: to keep us out of war. Women will play a large part in our defense program."

"Our Goal: Peace."

"In every community you will be called on to keep social life secure, and industrial life running efficiently.
You will hold jobs of many kinds.
But above all, you will keep our eyes fixed on our goal: peace, peace."

"I know about war at first hand, and I hate war. I saw the damage done by war at home and abroad—the loss of security and the extinction of civil liberties even in this land of the free. I have not forgotten that lesson. My every act as President will be to keep this country out of foreign wars, and to keep it at peace. I promise, as I have promised many times before, not to send your husbands and sons and brothers to death on a European or Asiatic battlefield."

"I will avoid bringing about a condition of affairs that will make war necessary, and I will never take this country into war until your representatives in congress have declared it."

"This army we will build will be the soundest, healthiest, and the strongest force in the world. But it will be an army for defense—and for nothing else."

"To keep our social gains and extend them—to build this army and equip it to defend us, we must be strong. We must produce. We must all work together. We must all sacrifice, all contribute something in time, in substance, and in effort. The women of America are prepared and willing to meet these demands."

"There are spiritual tasks which no government can perform. These lie directly in the hearts and hands of women. They lie in the home, and the meeting places of your religious faiths. Women are sensitive to the best ideals of life. You bring these ideals into your homes, and you send out from your homes the best inspirations of the world. You teach and train character at home."

"The nation depends on you to forge and strengthen the triple link between the home, religion, and good citizenship."

"I have spoken of my mother and I ask your indulgence for a further reference as personal as this. In this campaign I have fought the fight as I believe she would have had me fight it. I have kept faith as she would have had me keep it. I finish the course as she would have me finish it."

G. O. P. EXPOSES EFFORT TO BULLY AGED IN ILLINOIS

from E. J. Barrett.

Republican leaders exposed last night what they described as a desperate, last minute effort by the Democratic machine to bully old age pensioners into voting for President Roosevelt and other Democratic candidates.

Yesterday, in Chicago and thruout the state, thousands of pensioners received form letters from Edward J.
Barrett, retiring Democratic auditor of public accounts. In the letters, which were open political appeals, Barrett urged the pensioners to vote for Roosevelt; Harry B. Hershey for governor, and John C. Martin for auditor.

Barrett's Plea for Votes.

"It is important," wrote Barrett, "that the chief executives of the nation and state be men who are interested in the aged, and their problems." Barrett devoted considerable wordage in self praise as one "favoring giving the largest amount possible to old age recipients," and said Martin feels likewise. He also charged that the Republicans had opposed old age assistance.

Republican spokesmen were indignant over the Barrett letter and described it as "cheap tactics" designed to fool old age recipients. They said Barrett, in writing political appeals on his official stationery and using his official mailing list of pensioners, was stepping beyond the boundaries of his official duties.

"The Barrett letter is unfair to the elderly men and women receiving state aid," asserted Warren Wright of Jacksonville, Republican nominee for state treasurer. "It was sent out to be received 24 hours before the election."

Credits Them with Wisdom.

"I don't think it will fool anybody. Those who receive old age assistance have seen life. They have the wisdom that goes with their years; they don't have to be told the Barrett appeal is an insult to their intelligence."

Other leaders recalled that it was the Democrats who permitted the pensioners to suffer when the late
Gov. Horner, on the advice of Senator Slattery, vetoed the state pension law and thus held up the assurance of necessary federal aid. Moreover, the leaders added, pensioners today have the right to vote for whomever they wish.

HUGH JOHNSON ASKS WHY WE BUY TRANSPORTS

New York, Nov. 4 [Special].—Gen.
Hugh S. Johnson, in a bitter speech in Trenton, N. J., tonight accused the army and navy of stocking up with a fleet of overseas transports.
"To go where? To Oshkosh, Wis.?"
he taunted, charging the New Deal with a policy of intervention in Europe's war. Johnson went on to quote a speech in the congressional record by Senator Rush Holt (D., W.
Va.).

"He [Senator Holt] also revealed that the army is surveying the whole American market for caskets and coffins for your dead," Johnson thundered, continuing, "when he queried the military acknowledgement."

Johnson declared that the majority of the Jews in America are voting for Roosevelt "because they think he will lead us into war against Hitler."

Loop hotels reported a flood of reservations for supper rooms, and the managements prepared to furnish

ROOSEVELT ENDS CAMPAIGN WITH PLEA FOR UNITY

Closes Radio Speech on Prayerful Note.

every two years or every four years during our whole national existence.

"After the ballots are counted, the United States of America still will be united."

Urges All to Vote.

Mr. Roosevelt declared that dictators have forgotten or never knew that "the opinion of the people freely formed and freely expressed, without fear or coercion, is wiser than the opinion of any one man or any small group of men."

He urged all citizens to exercise their franchise.

The President was highly pleased by his reception in his home county, although he admitted he had no hope of carrying the counties he visited.

He was given a warmer welcome and greeted by larger throngs than ever before in his campaigning here.

Tomorrow night Mr. Roosevelt will receive returns in the library with members of his family and official intimates. He will leave his mother's home only to cast his vote in the town hall of his native village.

TEXT OF ROOSEVELT SPEECH

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 4 (AP)—Following is the prepared text of President Roosevelt's election eve radio address to the nation:

"Once more I am in the quiet of my home in Hyde Park on the eve of election day. I wish to speak to you not of partisan politics but of the nation, the United States of America, to which we all owe such deep and in-born allegiance.

"As I sit here tonight with my own family, I think of all the other American families—millions of families all thru the land—sitting in their own homes. They have eaten their supper in peace, they will be able to sleep in their homes tonight in peace. Tomorrow they will be free to go out to live their ordinary lives in peace—free to say and do what they wish, free to worship as they please.

Free to Make Choice.

"Tomorrow, of all days, they will be free to choose their own leaders, who, when that choice has been made, become in turn only the instruments to carry out the will of all of the people.

"And I cannot help but think of the families in other lands—millions of families—living in homes like our own. On some of these homes, bombs of destruction may be dropping even as I speak to you.

"Across the seas life has gone underground. I think I speak the minds of all of you when I say that we thank God that we live in the sunlight and starlight of peace—that we are not in war and that we propose and expect to continue to live our lives in peace—under the peaceful light of heaven.

"In this town, as in every community in our nation, friends and neighbors will gather together around the polling place.

Speech Is Unhindered.

"They will discuss the state of the nation, the weather, and the prospect for their favorite football team. They will discuss this present political campaign. Some will wear buttons proclaiming their allegiance to one candidate or another. And there will be a few warm arguments.

"But when you and I step into the voting booth, we can proudly say: 'I am an American, and this vote I am casting is the exercise of my highest privilege and my most solemn duty to my country.'

"We vote as free men, impelled only by the urgings of our own wisdom and our own conscience.

"In our polling places are no storm troopers or secret police to look over our shoulders as we mark our ballots.

Reviews Three Decades.

"My own personal participation in public affairs goes back as far as the year 1910, when I first became a candidate for the state senate from this district on the Hudson river.

"In the 30 years which followed, I have taken an active part in nearly every political campaign—local, state, and national. My interest has been that of a candidate for office; a public official; and a private citizen.

"In every political campaign, the question on which we all finally pass judgment thru the ballot box is simply this: 'Whom do I think is the best qualified to act as President, or governor, or senator, or mayor, or supervisor, or county commissioner, during the next term?'

"It is that right, the right to determine for themselves who should be their own officers of government, that provides for the people the most powerful safeguard of our democracy. The right to place men in office, at definite, fixed dates of election for a specific term, is the right which will keep a free people always free.

Facts Dictators Forget.

"Dictators have forgotten—or perhaps they never knew—the basis upon which democratic government is founded: That the opinion of all the people, freely formed and freely expressed, without fear or coercion, is wiser than the opinion of any one man or any small group of men.

"We have more faith in the collective opinion of all Americans than in the individual opinion of any one American.

"Your will is a part of the great will of America. Your voice is a part of the great voice of America. And when you and I stand in line tomorrow for our turn at the polls, we are voting equals.

"In the last 20 years the number of those who exercise the right to vote in national elections has been almost doubled. There is every indication that the number of votes cast tomorrow will be by far the greatest in our history.

Proof that Democracy Works.

"That is the proof—if proof be needed—of the vitality of our democracy.

"But our obligation to our country does not end with the casting of our votes. Every one of us has a continuing responsibility for the government which we choose.

"Democracy is not just a word, to be shouted at political rallies and then put back into the dictionary after election day.

"The service of democracy must be something much more than mere lip service. It is a living thing—a human thing—composed of brains and muscles and heart and soul.

"The service of democracy is the birthright of every citizen, the white and the colored; the Protestant, the Catholic, the Jew; the sons and daughters of every country in the world, who make up the people of this land. Democracy is every man and woman who loves freedom and serves the cause of freedom.

Urges All To Vote.

"Last Saturday night, I said that freedom of speech is of no use to the man who has nothing to say—that freedom of worship is of no use to the man who has lost his God. And tonight I should like to add that a free election is of no use to the man who is too indifferent to vote.

"The American people and the cause of democracy owe a great deal to the very many people who have worked in an honorable way on each side in this campaign. I know that after tomorrow they will all continue to cooperate in the service of democracy, to think about it, to talk about it, and to work for it.

Tomorrow you will decide for yourselves how the legislative and executive branches of the government of your country are to be run during their next terms and by whom.

"After the ballots are counted, the United States of America will still be united."

"Discussion among us should and will continue, for we are free citizens of a free nation. But there can be no arguments about the essential fact that in our desire to remain at peace by defending our democracy, we are one nation and one people.

"We people of America know that man cannot live by bread alone.

"We know that we have a reservoir of religious strength which can withstand attacks from abroad and corruption from within.

"We people of America will always cherish and preserve that strength. We will always cling to our religion, our devotion to God—the faith which gives us comfort and the strength to face evil.

Prayer for Peace.

"On this election eve, we all have in our hearts and minds a prayer for the dignity and integrity and peace of our country.

"Therefore, in this last hour before midnight, I believe that you will find it fitting that I read to you an old prayer which asks the guidance of God for our nation:

"Almighty God, who has given us this good land for our heritage; we humbly beseech Thee that we may always prove ourselves a people mindful of Thy favor and glad to do Thy will. Bless our land with honorable industry, sound learning, and pure manners. Save us from violence, discord, and confusion; from pride and arrogance, and from every evil way.

"Defend our liberties, and fashion into one united people the multitudes brought hither out of many kindreds and tongues. Endow with the spirit of wisdom those to whom in Thy name we entrust the authority of government, that there may be justice and peace at home, and that, thru obedience to Thy law, we may show forth Thy praise among the nations of the earth.

"In the time of prosperity, fill our hearts with thankfulness, and in the day of trouble, suffer not our trust in Thee to fail; amen."

GLENVIEW NAVAL AVIATION BASE TO GET TROPHY

An aerial demonstration and impressive ceremonies are planned for Nov. 16 at Glenview naval reserve aviation base when the Edwin Francis Conway memorial trophy will be presented there. The base was chosen from among the 13 in the nation by the naval reserve inspection board. The Boston base won last year.

In judging, the board takes into consideration cleanliness, upkeep of the base, appearance and behavior of personnel, the flying record and ability of the reserve squadron at each base.

EMPLOY WILLKIE FOR PROSPERITY, LABORITE ADVISES

Asserting that Wendell L. Willkie has the confidence of business and knows the cure for depression and can apply it, Thomas Humphris, business representative of the Du Page County Building Trades council and secretary of the Republican state labor division, urged last night in a radio address that Willkie be "employed by the American people."

"The President and the New Deal defeatists say we must reconcile ourselves to the barnacle of a huge army of unemployed on our industrial ship," Humphris said. "They offer no hope. Under them we will remain depressed, penurious, and jobless. Democratic rule has invariably brought depression, a lowered standard of living, and disaster.

"Labor does not seek paternalism or jobs thru government control that lead to enslavement as in the European dictatorships. The same principle that leads to the fixing by government of maximum hours and minimum wages permits the fixing of minimum hours and maximum wages. Labor asks the right to deal for itself. The party of prosperity is the party of labor."

VOTE ON LIQUOR SALES TODAY IN 16 OLD PRECINCTS

Voters in 16 precincts as they existed in 1932, but which now embrace 28 precincts or parts of precincts, will vote today on the question of prohibiting beer and liquor sale. The state liquor control law compels the use of 1932 precinct boundaries in local option referendums.

Wet-dry balloting is being carried on in two south side wards, the 2d and 3d, and in the 39th and 40th wards on the northwest side. Most of the south side areas in question are known as colored neighborhoods.

The wards and precincts where the dry question is on the ballot are: Second ward—Old 62d precinct, which includes parts of present 59th and 62d.

Third ward—Old 2d, including present 62d and part of 69th; old 12th, same as present 12th; old 16th, same as present 16th; old 17th, which includes new 17th and part of 81st; old 18th, including new 19th and part of 24th; old 35th, including new 35th and part of 90th; old 56th, including new 56th and part of 91st.

Sixteenth ward—Old 40th, including parts of new 40th and 72d; old 41st, same as new 41st; old 42d, including parts of new 40th and 42d; old 43d, including parts of new 42d and 43d; and old 44th, same as new 44th.

Thirty-ninth ward—Old 1st precinct, including all of new 1st excepting the part lying east of the North Western tracks.

Forty-ninth ward—Old 36th precinct, same as new 36th.

The state election law provides that precincts be limited as nearly as possible to 400 votes.

PREDICT COUNTY VOTE BORDERING 2,130,000 MARK

Registration Gains Point to 5% Increase.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The Cook county vote in today's election is expected to roll well up to the 2,130,000 mark. Intense interest in the Willkie-Roosevelt contest has been reflected in the increased registration.

Political analysts look for an increase of between 5 and 6 per cent over the vote cast in the county in the last Presidential election in 1936. In that year 1,954,370 votes were cast in Cook county for Roosevelt and Landon. Of these, 311,574 came from the country towns. Including the vote of 49,000 for William Lemke, Union Progressive, and scattered votes for other minor candidates, the Cook county total in the 1936 Presidential contest ran up to 2,009,457 votes.

County's Vote Half of State's.

Cook county four years ago cast 50.7 per cent of the Roosevelt-Landon vote in the entire state. In the contest for senator (Lyons vs. Lucas) two years ago, the county cast 51.4 of the entire Lucas-Lyons vote in the state.

Of the contests for county offices this year, that over the state's attorney's office is the headline. State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, a Democrat, is opposed by Judge Oscar F. Nelson, Republican. The battle between these two is furnishing has been one of the most blistering in years. In the straw vote conducted by THE TRIBUNE, which was concluded last Sunday, Courtney led in the Chicago straws, Nelson led in the country towns. Courtney had 53.3 per cent of the straws on the south side and 58.2 per cent on the west side. On the north side Nelson led with 53.1 per cent. In the total Chicago poll Courtney had 54.1 per cent and Nelson 45.9.

Courtney Given an Edge.

In the county towns outside Chicago, Courtney had 38.6 per cent and Nelson 61.4. The total Chicago vote in the 1936 election was more than five times the size of the country towns vote. The straws, projected, gave an indicated vote of 52 per cent for Courtney in the entire county.

If Courtney is reelected he will be the first third term state's attorney in Cook county's history. Some former incumbents of the office, including Macley Hoyne and Robert E. Crowe, served eight years—two terms. All incumbent county officials up for reelection are Democrats. Edward J. Kaindl, recorder of deeds for the last six years, is opposed by A. W. Komarek, Republican, a Riverside real estate agent, and the fur has been flying in their campaign speeches.

Conroy Seeks Third Term.

GREEN PREDICTS G. O. P. VICTORY IN BIG LOOP RALLY

A cheering crowd of more than 3,500 gathered in the Board of Trade building courtyard yesterday afternoon to hear Dwight H. Green, candidate for governor, urge defeat of the Kelly-Nash machine and predict victory for the Republican ticket. Employees of the Insurance Exchange building and the Board of Trade paraded La Salle street amid a swirling shower of ticker tape and paper. They carried signs bearing slogans "Lash Kelly-Nash," "Let's Have Fair Dealers, Not New Dealers," and "Unpack the Supreme Court."

The parade was led by the Board of Trade band and Board of Trade Drum and Bugle corps. The meeting was sponsored by the Insurance Employees association and the Board of Trade Service Men's league. Following Green's talk, Wayland Brooks, Republican candidate for United States senator, greeted the crowd and called on the voters to elect Wendell L. Willkie as "the hope and the champion of a free America."

Arthur C. Lueder, nominee for state auditor, said he was proud to be on the same ticket with Brooks and Green and urged election of the entire Republican slate to restore government to the people in Illinois and the nation.

A. Swanson, Republican predecessor of Courtney. This contest has been comparatively quiet. Another Democratic wheelhorse, Frank Lyman, clerk of the Probate court, who was appointed to the vacancy caused by the death of Mitchell C. Robin, is opposed by William John Granata, a Republican who ran in 1928 against Robin. This is a fairly quiet fight.

Over the office of Superior court clerk, a bitter fight has been raging between Clerk Victor L. Schlaeger and Gustav E. Beery, Republican. Beery has charged that some deputy clerks have had their hands out for petty bribes from lawyers. Schlaeger has branded these charges false.

For coroner, the Republicans nominated a young physician, Edmund F. Bennett, to make the race against A. L. Brodie, Democrat, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Coroner Frank J. Walsh. This is a hard fought fight.

ILLINOIS SURGES TOWARD G. O. P.; RIVALS JITTERY

Campaign Fight Runs to Opening of Polls.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Illinois last night shared in the national roar that carried the 1940 election campaign right up to the last possible minute for appeals to the voters.

The old tradition that the outcome was settled by the Friday night before the election, which has been fading for several years, was discarded completely as meetings, public statements to the press, and radio speeches continued on and on until after midnight—less than six hours before the opening of the polls.

Illinois joined the rest of the country in listening to the broadcasts by national figures but it had speakers of its own throughout the evening. Both state and county candidates were on the air.

Brooks and Green Heard.

First there was Wayland Brooks, Republican nominee for United States senator, followed an hour later by his running mate, Dwight H. Green, nominee for governor. Later came the Democrats, Senator James M. Slattery and Harry B. Hershey, candidate for governor.

Throughout the grand finale the dominant notes were the fighting spirit and the feeling of confidence steadily increased in the last few days by the flood of indications that Illinois will go Republican.

That chorus of increased optimism did not abate an iota with the issuance of the official forecast of what politicians here call Democratic weather—colder and light rains early in the day. But neither did that prediction cheer up the Democrats who for some time have been feeling jittery and uncertain, many of them admitting it privately.

No Definite Victory Claim.

That condition of doubt was believed reflected in the complete and unprecedented failure of Democratic party chieftains to issue definite, arithmetical claims of victory. In all elections since the Democratic machine came into power, P. A. Nash has issued definite claims of victory naming the thousands he said would be the margin of Democratic victory. So far as is known he has issued no such statement this time. Neither has any other organization here.

On the Republican side, some of the spokesmen of the organization have issued definite figures. They have differed widely but a last minute inquiry of the best informed men in the organization produced a combined estimate that Illinois will go Republican by between 150,000 and 200,000 votes.

National polls and similar tests placed Illinois in the column of those states leaning Republican but still classified it as one of the doubtful ones, a fact that made both sides throw in their last ounce of energy.

Brooks Asks a Question.

Brooks' radio talk came at the dinner hour, and his subject was "Wendell Willkie, America's Hope." It dealt almost entirely with the national and international situation and closed with an appeal to vote for Willkie "for the preservation of America, its preparedness and its future peace."

Early in the speech, Brooks asked a question: "What will it mean if the American people break their third term tradition and reelect the government and the management of our government to the present administration?"

"It will immediately mean that they (the New Dealers) will declare that they have received the greatest mandate of all times—a mandate from the people to continue to attack and pack our Supreme court—a mandate to continue to hinder and harass our system of private enterprise—a mandate to continue to change our form of government—a mandate to continue to coerce and control our congress—a mandate to continue to spend and pile higher than ever the debt on the American people—a mandate to carry out their threats against other people.

"What does it mean? It can mean only one thing for America—chaos, confusion, and certain war."

Since he is running for state office, Dwight Green confined his final talk more to the situation in Illinois and particularly in Chicago where he is making his fight against the Kelly-Nash machine. He described the present battle as a crusade waged by the people.

"The upsurge against misrule," he said, "has become a relentless force that will sweep all opposition before it."

Next on the Illinois political radio program was Senator Slattery, who after serving approximately 18 months at Washington by appointment of the late Gov. Henry Horner, pleaded the importance of men of experience in the senate at this time. Hershey, the last of the four to go on the air, spoke from a homecoming celebration in his honor at the Christian county courthouse in Taylorville. He was unfortunate in his final plea to the voters. He was late in reaching the microphone and, at the expiration of his time, was cut off the air in the middle of a sentence.

Up to that point Hershey had devoted most of his time to thanking the home folks for the honors bestowed on him. He also repeated by implication the charge that his opponent, Green, is backed by utility interests.

LEADERS IN MANY SPHERES WIND UP G. O. P. CAMPAIGN

Address Nation by Radio in Call for Victory.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
New York, Nov. 4.—In a smashing and dramatic climax to their campaign for the election of Wendell Willkie, leaders in many walks of national life tonight made their final plea to the voters of the country to flock to the polls tomorrow and send their man to the White House.

Carried on four radio networks between 11 and 12 p. m. Chicago time, the program was studied with a galaxy of prominent citizens and Willkie supporters.

Spectators at the Ritz theater here started the program and ended it in a "We Want Willkie" chant which rose to a crashing crescendo. Owen Root Jr., chairman of the Associated Willkie clubs and the original Willkie for President man, introduced Republican National Chairman Joseph Martin and handed him the gavel.

"People all over the country are crying for a new leader," declared Martin, "and they will not be denied. The battle of America is almost won."

Will Unite U. S., Says Martin.

"Willkie will reunite the American people," said Martin. "Class hatreds and domestic turmoil will end. One great people will join together under his leadership. They will unite and thru mutual understanding and respect will solve our domestic problems and build a better and busier America."

Gov. Raymond Baldwin interpolated an optimistic report on the Connecticut vote tomorrow. Then came the well known voice of the former New York governor and beloved New Yorker, Alfred E. Smith.

"Win, lose, or draw, Wendell Willkie has set this country an old-fashioned example of clean fighting and decency," said Smith. He declared that he never had seen "any candidate at any time who has gone thru all kinds of mud-slinging, whispering campaigns, and undercover smears, and can still keep his temper and good manners like Wendell Willkie has."

Savings in Danger.

Discussing savings and insurance under the New Deal, Smith said the bank depositors in many cases now receive "2 per cent interest instead of 4 per cent and you get it every six months instead of every three."

"The insurance companies," he went on, "tell the same story. The income of insurance companies has gone down; therefore, the dividend to their policyholders is reduced. Premiums have gone down. Therefore the cost to policyholders has gone up."

"Is the New Deal responsible? If so, will the downward trend continue, will the rate on savings bank accounts become less and the cost of premiums for life insurance more?"

The answer is yes. "Are you satisfied that you are going to get it back at its full value?" he asked. "You haven't time to think it over. You can't escape an answer tomorrow. If you give the New Deal a third term you can only blame yourselves for what will happen."

Then Senator Hiram Johnson spoke from Washington. His words were grave:

"You people listening are aware that the greater part of my life has been spent in the cause of keeping America for Americans."

"President Roosevelt has promised the American people not to lead them into this war raging overseas. In consideration of the President's past actions and broken pledges, I can put no faith in his avowed. But I am convinced that a vote for Wendell Willkie means a vote for real defense without involvement in Europe's inferno of war."

Mary Pickford revealed that hundreds of workers in the movie industry who never appeared on the screen are supporting Willkie. Then a New York garage worker disclosed that out of 325 cars in the garage tonight, 298 bore Willkie stickers.

Robert M. Rownd, past national commander of the G. A. R., 96 years old, said he had voted for Lincoln and was now flying home to vote for Willkie.

Englewood Queen

PATRICIA TRENT.

Miss Patricia Trent, 18 years old, was selected beauty queen of the Englewood district last night. She competed with 25 young women for the honor. Miss Trent will reign at the Englewood jubilee week, from Nov. 10 to 16, celebrating the 50th anniversary of the annexation of Englewood to Chicago. She lives at 6401 South Bishop street. The contest was held in the Ogden park fieldhouse, 6500 South Racine avenue.

champion, Joe Louis, drew applause. "I think Mr. Roosevelt has made a lot of people just plain lazy with relief," said the champ, "and taken away their pep with WPA. Just sitting home waiting for relief is no way for people to live. Mr. Willkie's a regular fellow and a real fighter. He can take it all right—and he can dish it out. And that's the kind of a man for me."

Warns Freedom in Peril. Speaking from Phoenix, Ariz., Lewis Douglas, former director of the budget under Roosevelt, charged the third term would "bring us nothing but the loss of every right we hold dear—the loss of our freedom and liberty."

And next Willkie was introduced, amid thunderous applause. His election would not be the end of the crusade, but the beginning, he promised, for the united nation would start a crusade to return to "hard work, thrift, charity, honesty, and peace thru strength."

Raymond Moley, an original "brain trust" and once undersecretary of state in the Roosevelt administration, compared Willkie with Cyrano de Bergerac, the brave soldier-poet in the Rostand play.

"You feel it in his dogged determination to speak on and on—to tell America to awake—to assert herself—and to fight against all that threatens her—against dictatorship, against prejudice, against a calloused, self-interested little group of ambitious men seeking to retain power to the means the end of democracy," he said.

Wary of Pipe Dreams.

Gov. Harold Stassen said the people in Minnesota want a practical man like Willkie in the White House; that they are weary of "experiments and pipe dreams and of an administration that spends money like a drunken sailor."

Then Kathleen Norris, the novelist, told of letters from mothers who took away their right to train their own children.

Thomas E. Dewey, the racket-busting prosecutor, indicted the present regime for its failure to solve unemployment, balance the budget, to provide adequate defense, and to eliminate racketeers from labor unions.

"No silver tongued orator can shield the broken promises those failures represent," stated Dewey. "If the third term campaign should be successful," he said, "then each day of the next four years" would be "a living affront to those who created this republic, to those who gave us our freedom."

More Blows At Business. "Every day would bring us more reprisals against business, against the press, against all those who dare to disagree," the district attorney asserted.

"Every day would bring new appeasements to those who hate our country—appeasement for the communists and the fellow travelers on the federal payroll. Every day would fasten new shackles upon the independence of the congress."

Gen. Hugh Johnson recalled the campaign fight against "all the muck the New Deal could dig up, including assorted vegetables, eggs and a wastebasket." Willkie came thru it with his chin up and his head held high, the general said.

Means Jobs, Says Lewis. Chairman John L. Lewis of the C. I. O. declared his belief in Willkie's ability to put America back to work.

John Kieran, the sports writer, said he had met Willkie first on the program, "Information Please," and the people were going to have a President who is "really one grand guy."

Miss Clare Booth, the playwright, quipped: "I like to see my actors in the theater, not in the White House. This election Booth goes for Willkie."

In conclusion Congressman Charles Halleck of Indiana, who nominated the candidate at the national convention, said Willkie is a real fighter but unfortunately his opponent had refused to come out into the open to face the issues.

WALLACE MAKES FINAL PLEA FOR FARMERS' VOTES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace today in a radio address to farmers said that the agriculture issue of the present campaign was whether "we shall turn our farm program over to the holding company candidate and his Wall Street backers or whether we shall go on with President Roosevelt."

The Democratic Vice Presidential nominee and former secretary of agriculture accused Republicans in congress of having a record of "stubborn opposition" to New Deal farm legislation, which he contended had raised farm income to a "fairly good level of prosperity."

Wallace said the Agricultural Adjustment administration, which he termed the "backbone of the whole farm program," had brought "into being a nation-wide economic democracy for the first time in history."

A MISS SHEDS NO LIGHT ON HER MYSTERY

Miss Anna Prishby, 18 years old, can't understand how she happened to have her clothes off Sunday night when police arrested her escort, Stanley Zamojski, for speeding at 40th street and the outer drive.

It certainly is strange, she told Judge Jay A. Schiller yesterday in the Woman's court, where the couple was arraigned.

"I certainly had my clothes on when I got into the car," Miss Prishby continued. "We had a few drinks but I don't remember taking anything off."

Judge Schiller fined her escort $200 and costs for disorderly conduct and $5 and costs for speeding. The young woman was fined $1. On the couple's plea that they intend to be married shortly, the judge said he would entertain a motion to vacate the fines and continued the case to Nov. 19.

REPORTS PACKING WORKERS FAVOR WILLKIE BY 52%

Sentiment among Chicago's packinghouse workers is about 52 per cent for Wendell L. Willkie and 48 per cent for President Roosevelt, it was reported yesterday by Henry Johnson, assistant national director of the Packinghouse Workers' Organizing committee, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

He said the swing over from their preponderant support for Roosevelt in 1936 can be attributed to C. I. O. Chief John L. Lewis' leadership in citing the President's failure to solve the nation's domestic problems.

Boy, 9, Dies of Injuries in Fall Thru Skylight

Edward Campbell, 9 years old, died in the Chicago hospital last night several hours after he had fallen thru a skylight of an empty garage at 2140 East 47th street on which he and other boys had been playing. The boy lived at 4656 Woodlawn avenue.

DEMOCRATS WIND UP WITH A 2 HOUR BROADCAST SHOW

Go on Radio with Song, Dance, and Oratory.

New York, Nov. 4 (Special).—Led by President Roosevelt, the Democratic party closed its national campaign tonight with a two hour radio show of song, dance, and oratory broadcast from coast to coast thru the facilities of two major networks.

From 9 to 11 p. m., Chicago time, from Washington, from New York, from Chicago, from Hyde Park, and from Hollywood came the speeches, songs, and music. Between bursts of rhetoric from politicians, actors, and poets, were heard the tapping feet of Bill Robinson, the band music of Benny Goodman, and the choral voices of the Ladies' International Garment Workers of America.

Flynn Rallies Cohorts. The radio appeals ranged from humor to prayer, and ended with a warning from Chairman Edward J. Flynn of the Democratic National committee to party workers everywhere to be sure to "get out early" to corral the votes. Predicting victory, he shouted: "You have plowed the field and the harvest is at hand!"

The campaign radio windup opened in Carnegie hall, every seat crowded, with Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York City as chairman.

"This is not a political meeting but a victory meeting—a meeting of joy," La Guardia said. Then to the singing of a campaign song, "Yes, Sir, That's the Way," Bill Robinson, the Negro dancer, tapped the boards audibly for two minutes.

Alexander Woolcott, critic, author, and actor, was presented. His talk, described as semihumorous, was directed against the newspapers, particularly the New York Times and the New York Herald-Tribune, for their support of Wendell Willkie.

1936 Stand Recalled. "I remember that most of the newspapers were against President Roosevelt in 1936, but that he managed to squeeze thru," Woolcott said. He asked for the President's reelection as the only man who "can give hope to our faith, hope, and charity."

Mayor La Guardia interrupted at this point to dedicate a musical number to Mr. Willkie. He called it "Gone with What Wind?" The music was played by Benny Goodman's band.

Irving Berlin, songwriter, was next introduced as a "great American and son of one of those groups" which Mayor La Guardia asserted had been subjected to racial attacks by the Republicans. He sang his own composition, "God Bless America." Marion Anderson, colored singer, was also presented as a representative of a minority group. She sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

Marshall Field Speaks. The first serious speaker, next on the program was Marshall Field. "Let us beware of promises of increased production," he said. "They sound reminiscent of the years before 1932 of overproduction and underconsumption. I believe with all sincerity that business is in a more sound condition than it has ever been before."

The courage of President Roosevelt saved us in 1932. Since then business men have found a more solid prosperity.

"Don't let the Old Dealers tell you it is not so. Production today has risen higher than the highest point in 1929, and 10,500,000 more people are employed today than in 1932. Don't let them tell you that if we have a new President, prosperity is just around the corner."

Hollywood Joins In.

The program was switched to Hollywood, with the announcement that Walter Huston, Pat O'Brien, James Cagney, Dorothy Lamour, Rosalind Russell, Gertrude Nissen, Joan Bennett, Thomas Mitchell, and other celebrities were ready to root for Roosevelt.

Miss Nissen sang; Mitchell read an excerpt from a Lincoln speech; Melvyn Douglas read a letter written by Washington; Huston read a humorous saga called "Uncle Sam Gets Around," and Miss Bennett spoke.

"This is the first speech in my life, and I am glad it is not political," said Miss Bennett. "I don't intend to tell other people how to vote, but for myself, I cast my fate."

and the fate of my children with the smiling, friendly man who is for the common people. I want no war; I want a warm fire on my hearth. That is why I am going to vote for Roosevelt."

Wallace Comes Next. Vice Presidential Candidate Henry A. Wallace, in Washington, next spoke. He said that the domestic market had suffered in the years immediately following the first world war; that nations raised tariff barriers and at the same time began preparing for another war, and then this new war further closed American agricultural markets.

"It was necessary for the farmers to use the authority of the government," said Wallace, referring to the era before the present war. "A stabilized market was needed against the loss of markets due to world changes. Crop control became a necessity. The government also lowered interest rates to stop waves of bankruptcies and foreclosures, and at the same time began to assist tenant farmers to become owners."

"This year we have turned our thoughts to keeping America out of war. We have, with our farm program, protected ourselves against a possible source of internal collapse."

Pledges Peace Safeguards. "So long as all the Americas stand firm against outside aggression our chances of keeping out of war are greatly strengthened. We do not know what unexpected events may occur in the other half of the world, but for ourselves we are keeping up the safeguards of peace."

The next voice heard was that of Secretary of State Cordell Hull. He told of the rise of civilization from the dark ages, and then the terrible scourges of war now again visiting other parts of the world.

"Men who love liberty cannot be conquered," he said. "For myself the choice is clear. As we go to the polls tomorrow, let there be in our hearts profound thanksgiving for the privilege of a free election remains in all its vigor. Let us exercise our franchise of self government with calm and dispassionate judgment. The right to vote is the right to differ."

Hull Introduces President. Secretary Hull then introduced the President, who spoke from his Hyde Park home. Following the President's address, Miss Dorothy Thompson, columnist, made an appeal for the President's reelection.

"If every known means of seducing and befuddling the American people can win, Willkie can win," she said. "The Republicans promise a mirage if a business man can win. There will be two turkeys and two Lincolns in every home. The Republicans suggest slackened. Get your own vote out early, and see to it that everyone who sees with you gets out."

From Chicago spoke Carl Sandburg, Lincoln biographer. He likened President Roosevelt to Samuel of the Bible who was "not the perfect man, but more precious than gold." He quoted Owen Lovejoy as saying of Lincoln: "If he [Lincoln] is not the best conceivable President, he is the best possible."

The program ended with the singing of patriotic songs by a chorus from the Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

DEMOCRATS TOSS VOTES TO G.O.P. IN WISCONSIN RACE

Party Leaders Assail New Deal Betrayal.

BY THORNTON SMITH.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 4.—The strong Milwaukee county Democratic organization moved today to thwart the Roosevelt deal to help elect Senator Robert M. La Follette in return for Progressive votes for a third term for the President.

Edward P. Curry, Democratic county chairman, issued a statement calling on Democrats to vote for Fred H. Clausen, Republican candidate for United States senator. The only hope of the Democratic organization in Wisconsin, he said, is to defeat La Follette and restore two party government in the state.

Milwaukee county casts more than one-fifth of the vote of the state. Curry, who also is a leader of the pro-Roosevelt party organization of Wisconsin, said his statement had been approved by more than a majority of the members of the county committee, the county candidates, and many voters. He said it was an official document.

The administration support of La Follette and the local machine's endorsement of Clausen leave James E. Finnegan, the Democratic primary nominee for senator, a known conservative, still pledging loyalty to Roosevelt and protesting that a vote for him will result in a victory for liberalism.

The new deal approval of Senator La Follette, expressed by Charles E. Broughton, national committeeman, who repudiated Finnegan in his newspaper, the official state paper.

It was sounded again by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, candidate for Vice President, in a speech at Madison that tore the party wide open and caused Francis E. McGovern, candidate for governor; Gustave J. Keller, president of the Democratic party organization; and other party leaders to walk out of the alliance platform and out of the hall meeting. Democratic Senator Robert Wagner of New York spoke here last night for La Follette.

Double Dealing Assailed.
The deal was anticipated as long ago as the Democratic state convention when Willis E. Donley, Menomonee, veteran Democrat, declined the party endorsement for attorney general because of his conviction that the support of the President would be thrown against the Democratic state ticket.

"We are disgusted beyond the point of endurance," the Curry statement said, "with the tactics employed by the leadership of our party and the chieftains of the Progressive party. We believe that good government can only be returned to this state by defeating the Progressive party, which is truly the party of confusion and double dealing."

"The only practical way we know to accomplish that end is to defeat Dictator La Follette and retire him permanently to his estate in Virginia."

"The Democratic nominee for senator has been brutally betrayed and mistreated by the leadership of his own party. Our conclusion is that the Democrats of Wisconsin and this deplorable condition by ridding Wisconsin of the La Follette dynasty. In order to accomplish this, we urge that all Democrats cast their votes for Fred H. Clausen. We realize this drastic action is necessary and justified in order to make possible the restoration of the Democratic party in its proper place of prestige."

Way to End Conniving.
"The reestablishment of the two party system in Wisconsin is the only way to put an end to the vicious and un-American minority rule that has prevailed here because of conniving between the La Follettes and Democratic officials such as Broughton, Wallace, Leo T. Crowley, head of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, and Thomas King, new state chairman."

The Curry statement was followed tonight by an appeal by former Democratic State Senator William H. Shenners, now secretary of the Wisconsin Jefferson Democrats, urging all Wisconsin Democrats to vote the straight Republican ticket.

Shenners' appeal was in a letter mailed broadcast to Democrats. It urged them to remember the wrecking of the Democratic party in 1934. "Remember," the letter said, "our worthy Democratic candidates who have gone down to defeat and will go down to defeat, and that their sacrifice, we hope, some day will be the means of rebuilding our party into a true and honest Democratic organization."

"We have one duty to perform at this time so that there shall be no confusion or error. We must vote the straight Republican ticket. Willie, McNary, Hell, and by all means, Clausen, so we may eliminate once and for all the opportunist party of La Follette and come back to a two party form of government."

Charles E. Broughton's comment on Curry's statement was that he could not see how any informed Democratic chairman could suggest leaving the party and attempting to defeat the county ticket.

The new deal approval of Senator La Follette is a repetition in effect of President Roosevelt's action in 1934 when he came to Wisconsin and gave his blessing to Senator La Follette.

Evanston voters today will be given two ballots in addition to the national one. The first will bear the names of four candidates for clerk of the municipal court for a four year term.

They are Edwin A. Lucado, the present clerk, named last year by Chief Justice Harry H. Porter, following the death of Jesse D. Kindig; Henry P. Kluge, an Evanston constable; Zora B. Kindig, widow of the former clerk, and John B. Treff, an Evanston justice of the peace.

The second ballot is a referendum on the question of whether Evanston shall be included in the provisions of the municipal retirement act, providing pensions for city employees who are not under social security. Only policemen and firemen have their own pension plans at present.

QUOTES STELLE'S SLUR ON MACHINE —IN THE PRIMARY

Cross Shows Governor's Change of Heart.

BY HAL FOUST.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Springfield, Ill., Nov. 4.—"The machine will roll today. Boss Kelly has supervised its rolling, and its chief mechanic, Jacob Arvey, has checked its motors. The machine's objective is the heritage of freedom which comes down to us from our forefathers."

"The machine aims at control of the ballot box, and control of the ballot box takes from the people that weapon which our forefathers provided for the protection and preservation of our freedom. The machine must be destroyed, or it will destroy us."

These words were from John Stelle. They were spoken on April 8, on the eve of the primary election, in which he was an unsuccessful candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. They were spoken against the state ticket headed by Harry B. Hershey that appears in the Democratic column on tomorrow's ballot.

Rival Meetings Held.
They were quieted tonight by Speaker of the House Hugh Cross, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, in the final downstate rally of the campaign.

Cross delivered his talk at a Republican meeting in Gillespie, a town of 5,511 population, in the coal fields 35 miles south of here. Gov. Stelle, the new head of the state house machine now in harmony with the Nash-Kelly organization, addressed a Democratic meeting across the street in support of the Hershey ticket.

Fifteen policemen, six in state uniforms, were in Gillespie to preserve order among the miners. The state presidents of the rival A. F. of L. and C. I. O. miners' unions have endorsed Dwight Green, the Republican candidate for governor, and the Democrats have been accused of trying to promote dissension in the ranks.

Pay Rollers Are Busy.
The capitol here today was virtually abandoned as the employees, including those under civil service, were in their home precincts with instructions from the political bosses to deliver at the polls tomorrow.

Gov. Stelle was in his office and with Pete Rossiter, his new patronage boss, was receiving reports that many of the state employees are not functioning to the satisfaction of their county and precinct committees.

Some of the civil service employees have refused to electioneer in violation of civil service laws, anticipating that a Republican victory will save them from illegal discipline.

The governor denied knowledge of any order to the state police last Saturday not to arrest motorists until after the polls closed except for the most flagrant offenses. Unlike its neighboring states, the Illinois police are under the spoils system. Also, like other state pay rollers, they have to donate 2 per cent of their wages to the slush fund.

250 Building Workers in Navy Yard on Strike
Portsmouth, N. H., Nov. 4 (AP).—Approximately 250 employees of the Abertaw company, engaged in construction work in the Portsmouth navy yard, struck today, demanding wage increases and reinstatement of two men who were discharged. M'NARY DEMANDS VOTERS HEAD OFF NEW DEAL 'ROUT'

Salem, Ore., Nov. 4 (AP).—Republican Senator Charles L. McNary concluded his Vice Presidential campaign tonight with the charge the New Deal is "taking deeper and deeper refuge in paternalism."

The senator, in an address prepared for delivery from his native city in a nationwide broadcast, said: "The New Deal, which assumed power when our forces had been demoralized by a world economic crisis, organized a retreat. The fault I charge now is that the New Deal continued to retreat from our traditions, taking deeper and deeper refuge in paternalism."

"Tomorrow we must decide whether this retreat shall go on. We must guard against a rout in the next four years; a rout in which might be lost our personal liberties, our substance and our power to make future decisions."

"The nation cannot exist, he said, 'half prosperous, half depressed.'"

CHARGES KELLY SEEKS TO RULE TRANSIT SYSTEM

Lyons Warns Chicago of Machine Control.

Richard J. Lyons, former state representative, charged in a radio address last night that the Kelly-Nash machine is seeking to put thru a transportation plan for Chicago that will give the machine political control over the 20,000 jobs held by the transit lines' workers.

Mayor Kelly, Lyons asserted, has blocked plans for a 30 million dollar modernization of the street car lines since this was proposed by the lines in 1936, the reason for the delay, he declared, is that Mayor Kelly wants the surface and elevated lines merged into one company to be controlled by a Kelly-Nash local transit commission.

Plans to Name Yes-Men.
Under present state laws, Lyons explained, regulation over Chicago's transit lines will pass from the state commerce commission to a new three man commission named by the mayor and the city council if a single unified company is formed.

"Mayor Kelly has already made his intentions clear," Lyons asserted. "He has stated publicly that he does not expect this transit commission to do anything it thinks the Kelly-Nash city council would disapprove. In other words, Mr. Kelly plans to name political yes-men to the commission."

After asserting that he had exposed in previous talks the "scandal" of the Kelly-Nash subway and the use of the car lines as a political football by the Kelly-Nash machine, Lyons said:

"Imagine having this political machine that has built a no-good subway, wasted a 74 million dollar traction fund, forbidden the spending of available cash for new street cars, kept employees from getting pensions, and allowed its favored friends to reap a 29 per cent a year profit from 10 cent bus fares—imagine a machine like that being entrusted with complete control over Chicago's transportation."

Says Good-by to Fairness.
"In would come Kelly-Nash job hunters and out would go workers of long and able standing. Along would come a new traction fund to be poured into a new gopher hole. In would come a system of car lines run by political machinery instead of transportation machinery. If that ever happens, good-by to fair treatment to employees."

"For eight years Mr. Kelly and his council have kept modern transportation from coming to Chicago. Now they want to run the whole traction works in the same extravagant and sordid style they have run the city government."

Lyons urged the election of the Republican ticket, including Dwight H. Green for governor, to prevent political domination by the Kelly-Nash machine over Chicago's transportation.

VOTERS MARK MORE COMPACT BALLOT TODAY

Voters will have a more compact ballot today than the one they were required to mark in the general election of 1936. The present ballot is 2 1/4 by 18 1/2 inches, compared with 2 1/4 by 22 1/2 in 1936.

There were seven party tickets and 113 names on the 1936 ballot, against four party tickets and 92 names in the present election. Present in 1936, but missing this year, are the Union Progressive, Socialist Labor, and communist—except for an occasional candidate for representative parties. Democratic, Republican, Prohibition, and Socialist parties are represented on both 1936 and 1940 ballots.

The 1936 ballot was longer by virtue of three extra contests in that year.

A Maze of Many Issues
Boils Down to Three.

ers at home to elect Mr. Roosevelt to a third term, as two years ago the re-election of Democratic Gov. Herbert Lehman by a scant 65,000 plurality was ascribed to rain in the rural regions.

Specializing on the job of getting Willie Wilkie to the polls, said the shins are the tens of thousands of independent Willie clubs, captained by young enthusiasts, that dot the country. The well high universal testimony of the canvassers for these clubs in rural communities is that the farmers are determined to get themselves and their families to the polls today despite any "Democratic weather."

Federal Largess Pours Out.

Right up to the last minute the Republican and Democratic organizations continued the bombardment of the electorate with arguments for the election of their respective candidates and maneuvers of numerous other kinds to influence voters.

The Democratic high command pushed to the limit the distribution of government largess and the promise of more to come, all in the name of Mr. Roosevelt, at the expense, of course, of the taxpayers.

In New York City the welfare department announced that beginning on Dec. 15 next 149,000 children under 16 on home relief rolls will receive a pint of milk a day free. The milk will be made available thru retail stores under a plan worked out by Mayor Fiorello La Guardia and the Federal Surplus Marketing Administration.

Called Only Coincidence.

It was only a coincidence, said the Democratic city authorities, that the announcement was made just before the election.

In New York's Harlem, where the Negroes have been backsliding from support of Roosevelt in alarming numbers, the Federal Surplus Marketing Administration was dispensing free hams and other food from numerous depots. The New York newspapers published pictures of lines of Negroes at the depots carrying away 28 pounds each of hams and other provisions.

In Lackawanna and neighboring anthracite counties of Pennsylvania, where the Democrats are hard pressed in this election, the Federal Surplus Marketing Administration is distributing 28,000 full size wool blankets, retailing at $10 and $12 apiece, to families of WPA workers. In addition 21,000 bed sheets and 7,500 baby size all wool blankets are being distributed.

Northern States Favored.

The distribution of free food by the government has been pushed feverishly in all parts of the country throughout the campaign with the same motive as that of the city boss who distributes free turkeys at Thanksgiving. Since July 1 the federal surplus food distribution has been initiated under the food stamp plan in 89 communities. The communities favored were chiefly in those northern states in which the Democrats stood in danger of defeat. Fewer than 10 of the 89 were in the safely Democratic south and most of those 10 were in Texas, where the Democratic split on the third term alarmed the Democratic managers.

More than 150 million dollars in benefit checks were rushed into the hands of farmers before election day. Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, regional Democratic manager in the middle west, attended to this matter in response to the complaint of the Kansas Democratic state chairman that delay of the checks two years ago until after the election cost the Democrats a senator in that state. Lucas' alibi for the delay was that there was a bottleneck in the check issuing machinery, created, it had been discovered by a Republican spy. He was gratified to be able to say that the employee had been fired and the check distribution would be speeded up.

Warning Given by Wallace.

Not entirely satisfied that the distribution of government money would hold the farmers in the Republican camp, former Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Democratic candidate for Vice President, threatened them with withdrawal of the farm subsidies if Roosevelt is reelected without the support of the agricultural states.

"Even the administration will continue friendly to the farmer," said Mr. Wallace in a speech to midwestern farmers a few days ago, "it will be said in the cabinet meetings—and I know something of cabinet meetings—that the farmers of the middle west are not in favor of the New Deal farm policies. . . . It will be said of the farmers that they have, by their vote in this election, rejected the agricultural program. Your position will suffer from that."

Mr. Wallace also continued right up to election day to denounce the Republicans as fifth columnist appeasers and to assert that this election is a contest between Roosevelt and Hitler, which Hitler will win if Wilkie is elected.

How to Keep Tab on Election Returns

Clip out this table and save it for tonight when you can tune in on radio station W-G-N and keep your own record of the Presidential election returns. There are 531 votes in the electoral college and 266 of these are necessary to elect a President. Opposite each state in the table is its electoral vote. Then a Republican column and a Democratic column are left blank for your own record. In these are to be set down the votes as they are announced. Each state's electoral vote is cast as a unit for the candidate who wins a plurality of the popular vote in that state. Also provided for comparative purposes are the electoral votes in the last three Presidential elections.

WARNS AMERICA ROOSEVELT WILL 'GET US IN WAR'

New York, Nov. 4 (AP)—John T. Flynn, author and economist, said tonight that he was "as convinced as that I live that Franklin D. Roosevelt will take us into this war."

In a nation-wide radio address, sponsored by the American Writers' Committee for Wilkie, Flynn declared "all the people I know who want to go into this war as quickly as possible are for Roosevelt."

Flynn said the "gravest decision" was that of "war or peace" and that "if you elect Mr. Roosevelt it will be in his hands."

"Think of that!" Flynn continued. "The awful issue of war or peace, the lives of your sons, in the hands of one man—a man who ignores congress, who will give away 50 ships of the American navy without asking congress."

"He changes his mind so freely and so lightly; he has made pledges—scores of pledges—to you as solemn as this pledge of peace, then forgotten them."

"A man who, tonight, over this very radio . . . will give another solemn assurance that he will not take you to war, but whose ships and airplanes are hurrying down to Martinique, and who on three or four fronts of danger is daily teetering on the edge of war—gambling on the chance of staying out."

COLLEGE MEN TOLD OF WORLD REVOLUTION BY NORMAN THOMAS

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 4 (AP)—Norman Thomas, Socialist party candidate for President, said tonight that perhaps the most serious thing of all today "is the general refusal of American college men . . . to recognize that we are dealing with a world in revolution."

"The failure to recognize this fundamental fact," he said in his closing campaign speech before the Harvard Socialist forum, "vitiates much of our thinking about the war. Even more does it vitiate our thinking about democracy in this country and the road to Fascism."

Asserting that "it is the young who matter most in the tasks that lie ahead," Thomas said: "There is only one choice that we can make; it is the choice between the cooperative commonwealth and the totalitarian state. . . . We are not gods in wisdom or power to save the world by the devil's means of war."

"Our basic social task should be to put machinery to work for the conquest of poverty."

MANY VOLUNTEER USE OF CARS FOR WILLKIE VOTERS

A gratifying response by Illinois motorists, both in Cook county and downstate, to a request for automobiles and drivers to carry voters to the polls today was reported yesterday by the Associated Wilkie Clubs of Illinois and by the G. O. P. state organization.

Charles O. Rundall, head of the Wilkie clubs, said the 2,000 cars offered for use in Cook county far exceeded his expectations and would be adequate for all extra needs. This number will be greatly augmented by cars from G. O. P. ward and precinct headquarters was emphasized by Ben L. Berve, Republican state central committee chairman, who has resolved reports that an average of from 5 to 10 cars will be available from each of the state's 8,379 precincts.

Motorists who volunteered their cars and services to the Wilkie clubs were assigned to that organization's 50 ward headquarters. Women volunteers will carry voters in wards where little if any trouble is expected, whereas men volunteered to drive their cars in danger areas.

Any one needing transportation to the polls today will be accommodated if he will call his Republican ward or precinct headquarters or telephone the Wilkie club headquarters at State 6920.

ELECTORAL VOTE: MIDDLEMEN PICK NEXT PRESIDENT

How American System of Balloting Works.

By this time tomorrow the voters of the nation will have determined who shall be President and Vice President of the United States for the next four years. But it won't be official until next month when the electoral college formally casts its ballots for the people's choice.

Altho it is more than 150 years old, the electoral college is heard of by the average citizen only about once in four years and, consequently, many persons' knowledge of its function is vague.

How System Operates. Briefly, then, this is how it operates:

Each state in the Union is allowed as many Presidential electors in the college as it has representatives in congress. For example, Illinois, with two senators, two congressmen at large, and 25 congressmen from districts, has 29 Presidential electors and an electoral vote of 29. Candidates for electors are chosen by the parties' state conventions. New York has 47, Arizona 3, etc.

There are 531 in the nation. On the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December (Dec. 15 this year), after the returns from the popular vote have been certified, the electors meet in the 48 state capitals and cast their ballots.

Each state's electors as a unit. That is, all the state's electoral votes go for the candidate who polled a plurality of the votes in that state, no matter how small that plurality may be.

Plurality Not Sufficient. To win, however, a candidate must have a majority of the electoral college vote. A plurality is not sufficient.

In the case of only two candidates, one is bound to have a majority. But if there should be three or four, one candidate might win a plurality of the college, but not a majority.

Under this system it can sometimes happen that a candidate can poll a plurality of the popular vote, yet lose the Presidency in the electoral college. James G. Blaine lost in this manner to Grover Cleveland in 1884. In the event no candidate obtains a majority in the college, the election would be thrown into the house of representatives, with the delegation from each state casting one vote.

Jefferson Named by Congress. Thomas Jefferson was the first President elected by congress. He and Aaron Burr tied with 73 votes each in the electoral college. Congress named Burr Vice President. John Quincy Adams was elected in this manner over Andrew Jackson in 1824.

A state's electoral vote can be divided only in rare instances. It can happen in a state which prints the electors' names on the ballots and which polls an extremely close popular vote. Illinois abolished the practice of printing electors' names in 1929.

After the electors have cast their votes in the 48 capitals, they sign a document certifying their vote and send it to Washington, where it is canvassed officially before a joint session of the house and senate, and the result is declared.

TOKIO, Nov. 4 (AP)—An informed source today said the choice of a new Japanese ambassador to the United States had narrowed to two men, Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, former foreign minister, and Ichiro Kobayashi, minister of commerce. Nomura, a former naval attaché in Washington with the reputation of being friendly to the United States, is considered the government's first choice, but it was said he had declined the post.

G. O. P. BACKERS TELL INCIDENTS OF VANDALISM

Supporters of Republican candidates reported several instances of hoodlums in connection with the display of signs advocating the election of Wendell L. Wilkie.

At the home of Harvey Kley, 2814 North Richmond avenue, on which a Wilkie-McNary sign was posted, was torn down by vandals. Walter Tyler, on whose home at 7115 South Mozart street a similar sign had been hung, chased away two men who were climbing a ladder in an attempt to tear down the sign. Later, he said, he received several threatening telephone calls. Tyler is the Republican captain in the 54th precinct of the 13th ward.

J. B. Hall, 2938 Eastwood avenue, reported that vandals had smashed the windshield of his automobile, parked at Clark street and North avenue. The windshield bore two Wilkie stickers.

HIJACKERS SEIZE TRUCK AND STEAL $5,000 IN CLOTHING

Hi-jackers made their appearance in Chicago again last night, taking a truck that had just been loaded with $5,000 worth of men's and women's clothes at the rear of the Morris B. Sachs clothing store at 6638 South Halsted street.

The truck was in charge of Robert Frankenhach, 23 years old, of 830 West 36th street, and Leo Straffer, 19, of 3719 South Halsted street, employees of a firm that delivers for the clothing company. They were about to leave for evening deliveries when four gunmen drove alongside.

The gunmen took command of the truck and drove it to an alley near 52d street and Racine avenue, where they forced the crew out. The empty truck was found later at 48th and Aberdeen streets.

JUDGE TRUDE FREES TWO G. O. P. WORKERS HELD ON SOUTH SIDE

Two Republican workers in the south side colored district who had been arrested evidently in retaliation for their electioneering were ordered released last night by Judge Daniel P. Trude. They are James Knight, owner of a tavern at 446 East 47th street, and James Williams, 406 East 51st street.

Wabash avenue police had seized them earlier supposedly because of their connection with policy game activity, but Judge Trude freed them when the police admitted they had no immediate evidence on which to place charges.

Newton Baker's Widow Raps New Deal Spending

New York, Nov. 4 (AP)—Mrs. Newton D. Baker, widow of the secretary of war in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, told a luncheon meeting today that the New Deal philosophy had "completely disillusioned" all her Democratic friends.

While the armed forces of the country were pleading for defense preparation, she said, "millions of dollars were spent on projects that were often worse than useless."

THE CAMPAIGN

Both Sides of it

REPUBLICAN
Our Godless Communities
BY CARLISLE BARGERON.
(Assigned by Republican National Committee.)

The New Dealers profess indignation because posters have appeared warning that "Dictators Hate Religion." ISN'T THIS A FACT? "Did not Lenin and Trotsky suppress the church in Russia?" Did not Hitler suppress it in Germany?

Is it not the recognized technique of revolution that the influence of the church must be destroyed in order that the dictator is worshiped instead?

This writer witnessed the following performance in Leningrad: Thousands of youngsters were massed in what had been a cathedral but was now used by the communists for propaganda purposes. A man appeared before the curtain of the stage and asked the youngsters if they wanted ice cream and cake. The youngsters eagerly shouted "Da, Da."

Well, pray to God, let's see if he will answer your prayers.

A Disappointing Prayer.
A fervent prayer went up and the youngsters looked expectantly for the lifting of the curtain. When it was lifted the stage was bare. As the youngsters remained stunned with disappointment, the man again appeared and said, in effect:

"God seems to have fallen down on you. Now, let's ask Stalin."

Whereupon the youngsters prayed just as fervently that Stalin please give them ice cream and cake. This time when the curtain was lifted, there was ice cream and cake aplenty for the hungry little mouths.

Now, in this country the past seven and a half years, hasn't there been a steadily increasing cynicism toward our TRADITIONS, our INSTITUTIONS which we have cherished, which have sustained us for more than 150 years.

Aside from Mr. Roosevelt, is there one single New Dealer whom you look upon as a church goer—one who on days of worship likes to get away from the turmoil of life and find meditation in the wholeness of a church?

Building for Recreation.
The New Deal has erected many communities such as Redville, W. Va., Hightstown over in New Jersey, Greenbelt near Washington, etc. These projects have been equipped with tennis courts, in many instances swimming pools. Just as in Russia, close attention has been given to recreation facilities.

HAS A CHURCH BEEN ERECTED IN A SINGLE ONE?
Schools have been erected where New Deal teachers propagate the New Deal philosophies. But churches—they have been overlooked.

As an example of the INTOLERANCE, ARROGANCE, the COMPLETE DISRESPECT FOR THE LAW on the part of the New Dealers, we cite the action of the White House secretary, Steve Early, in kicking a colored policeman.

Uvalde, Tex., Nov. 4 (AP)—No comment was forthcoming from the home of Vice President Garner tonight—pot even concerning his whereabouts.

Lights gleamed in the little first floor sunroom in the big brick residence where the Vice President usually reads after his dinner, but a question as to whether the Vice President was there brought the reply from Mrs. Garner:

"There will be no comment on anything from this house tonight." A secretary added: "Every one here is just about ready to go to bed." It was 7:30 p. m.

Earlier in the day Mr. Garner, in slouch khaki shirt and trousers and brown felt hat, strolled about the business section. He has been in DEMOCRATIC.

Roosevelt and Wallace
(Provided by the Democratic National Committee.)

President Roosevelt is one of the truly great leaders of American history.

With him at the helm, the security and prosperity of the United States will be safe.

The hour is late for argument. As conscientious citizens, you will vote as you think best for the nation's good.

But regardless of how you vote, we wish you to ponder this compelling statement by President Roosevelt, telling what he is fighting for in this election:

"I am fighting for a free America—for a country in which all men and women have equal rights to liberty and justice."

Fight Against Privilege.
"I am fighting against the revival of government by special privilege—government by lobbyists—government vested in the hands of those who favor and who would have us imitate the foreign dictatorships."

"I am fighting as I have always fought, for the rights of the little man as well as the big man, for the weak as well as the strong, for those who are helpless as well as for those who can help themselves."

"I am fighting to keep this nation prosperous and at peace."

"I am fighting to keep our people out of foreign wars and to keep foreign conceptions of government out of our United States."

"I am fighting for these great and good causes. I am fighting to defend them against the power and might of those who now rise up to challenge them."

"And I shall keep on fighting."

Choice Up to Voter.
This statement by President Roosevelt sums up the vital meaning of this election. The choice is yours.

You can go forward in safety with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull protecting the nation's destiny.

Or you can have the unholy alliance between Tom Girdler, labor's hater; Harry Bridges, the communist; and Ernest Weir and Joe Pew.

Why Girdler and Bridges have clasped hands to bring about the downfall of the President, we leave it to your good judgment to decide.

The safe course is to carry on with Roosevelt.

Chairman Edward J. Flynn extends the sincere thanks of the Democratic national committee to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and other newspapers which have published this column. Mr. Flynn said these newspapers have performed a distinguished public service in keeping with the finest traditions of American journalism.

It will be the first time in more than 40 years that Garner has not been running for a public office. The Vice President and Mrs. Garner usually are among the first to cast their ballots in Uvalde.

New York, Nov. 4 (Special)—Seventy-four prisoners, minor offenders who were sentenced to one day in the Jefferson Market detention pen because they couldn't pay their fines, broke the monotony of waiting until their release at 4 p. m. today by holding a poll on the election.

The result: Roosevelt, 43; Willkie, 31.

Two Teamster Officials Found Guilty.

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 4 (Special)—Two officials of Local 618, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, ruled by Daniel J. Tobin, ardent advocate of New Deal labor policies, were in the Oakland county jail here today, awaiting sentence for a brick yard bombing that narrowly missed costing three lives. They will appear before Judge George B. Hartwick on Nov. 12. It is expected they will appeal.

The men were convicted on Saturday by a jury in Circuit court for tossing the bomb which wrecked the Boyce Brothers brick yard office in Pontiac on May 24, 1939. The dynamite bomb tore thru the apartment above the brick yard office, miraculously missing Ralph Cronis, manager of the yard, his wife, and their daughter. The bombing occurred during a teamster's strike called in a campaign to organize Ogle county.

Charges Witness Threatened.
State's Attorney Charles L. Wilson of Oakland county obtained the conviction of the officials, Howard Burlingame, president of the local, and William Brownell, business agent, despite what he called the efforts of professional terrorists from Tobin's unions in other Michigan cities to bribe and intimidate the witnesses.

According to Wilson, two of the state's star witnesses, George Reynolds and Clarence H. Miller, told him they were bundled into a car by Joe Galbo, organizer for the teamster's union in Detroit, taken to Lansing, and there were offered bribes and made the witnesses.

The witnesses said that Galbo told them the teamster's union is in such bad condition it can't stand an investigation," Wilson said.

Wilson, his chief investigator, Earl Kehoe, and Lieut. William Walkin of the Michigan state police worked on the teamster terrorism case for 16 months before they obtained sufficient evidence to arrest Burlingame and Brownell.

Outside Forces Come In.
"We were thwarted every step of the way by union officials who came in from other towns," Wilson said.

"The rank and file union men here disliked the bombing as much as the citizens, but outsiders were determined to prevent a conviction in the case. They adopted a deliberate policy of terrorizing witnesses."

Burlingame and Brownell were convicted on a charge of aiding and abetting a bombing. Burlingame has a long criminal record, including a sentence of 10 years to a federal penitentiary in 1930 for white slavery. Brownell, a former teamster's organizer in Detroit, was convicted there a few months ago on a labor violence charge.

VALLETTE CASE LINK SOUGHT IN LOVE SHOOTING

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 4 (Special)—Chief of Police Leo F. Kamins revealed here today that he would cooperate with Chicago police to determine whether the .32 caliber gun used by Mrs. Ruth Freed, 37 years old, in a double shooting in a Peoria night club is the same gun used in the sensational murder of Audrey Vallette, known as the "Butterfly Girl," in Chicago in 1936.

Miss Vallette was slain by a woman who was never identified. Mrs. Freed's husband, Edward, admitted having been intimate with the girl. Mrs. Freed, a hostess at the club, disappeared after the shooting, but surrendered a year later. A coroner's jury absolved her in June, 1937, when witnesses failed to identify her.

The next chapter of the story occurred early Sunday in Peoria at the Talk O' The Town night club. Chief Kamins said Mrs. Freed came to Peoria from Chicago to determine if her husband was having an affair with Judy Allen, 22, a dancer at the Talk O' The Town. She discovered the two eating together at this club at 3 a. m. and, according to Kamins, shot her husband twice in the leg, and a woman bystander in the arm.

PART IN EUROPE PEACE RUMORS DENIED BY HULL

Has No Information on Reports, He Says.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Washington, D. C., Nov. 4.—State department officials said today they had no official knowledge of rumors that Adolf Hitler plans to make an address on possible peace terms. They also declined to disclose the contents of a message from the Vichy government to President Roosevelt regarding the future status of French possessions in this hemisphere.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, at his press conference, said that he had no official information concerning dispatches from abroad that peace proposals have been suggested by any of the European governments. This referred particularly to a report from England that terms to be suggested by Hitler for ending hostilities already had been transmitted to this government.

Nazi Deny Reports.
According to a London dispatch, these terms in general would provide that the "undefeated and unconquered British empire" would retain intact but Germany would assume domination over all of continental Europe. In Berlin, however, Nazi officials merely observed that the peace reports came from England.

Speculation still centered on the situation at Martinique. Details from San Juan, Puerto Rico, today said that two United States destroyers were seen patrolling off the islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe.

Mr. Roosevelt recently sent a personal message to Marshal Pétain, head of the French government at Vichy. While the contents of the message have not been disclosed, it is understood that inquiry was made into the possibility of closer cooperation between France and Germany and its effect on French possessions in the western hemisphere.

Indicates Favorable Reply.
Pétain's reply was delivered to Hull by the French ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye. From the comments dropped by Henry-Haye after seeing Hull and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, it was indicated that Pétain's reply was received favorably and apparently there was no need to fear that France would turn over these colonies to Germany.

"After conferring with both Mr. Hull and Mr. Welles I have the impression that their reaction to the French note was satisfactory," Henry-Haye said upon leaving the state department.

The ambassador asserted that as far as he is concerned there was no reason for not making the note public. Hull said that Pétain's reply would be referred to Mr. Roosevelt for his information and advice.

BERLIN SILENT ON REPORTS OF A NEW AXIS CONFERENCE

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
BERLIN, Nov. 4.—The German foreign office today was silent on the whereabouts of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, despite persistent rumors from foreign sources that he was meeting Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy somewhere in Germany.

Following a press conference, it was inferred that von Ribbentrop was on a "vacation." Sometime ago correspondents were informed that von Ribbentrop's whereabouts was a military secret, as was that of Adolf Hitler.

On the eve of the American Presidential election the German press strove to give the impression that it made no difference here who was elected, but one paper pointed out that after the Democrat, Woodrow Wilson, was elected America was drawn into the war against Germany in 1917.

MADRID POLICE TRAIL AS CAROL, LUPESCU STROLL

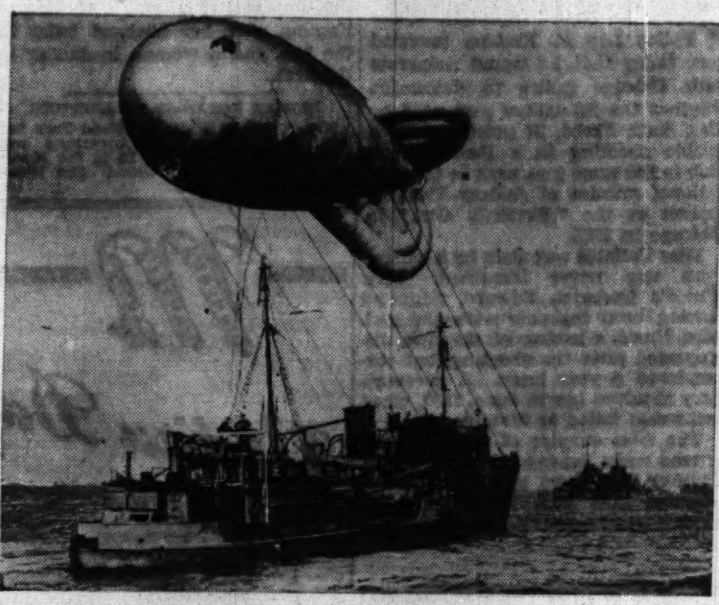

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
MADRID, Spain, Nov. 4.—Former King Carol of Rumania and his red-haired friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu, took a brief stroll today along the Paseo del Prado, which is a continuation of Paseo de la Castellana, and runs past the famous museum, Museo del Prado. They were followed by Spanish secret service agents. Carol's grand chamberlain, Ernest Urdareanu, and two minor members of the ex-king's party spent a few hours slipping sherry in a neighboring bar. They were accompanied back to their hotel by a police escort.

(Carol and his party went to Madrid to confer with Spanish authorities on Rumania's request for the extradition of Mme. Lupescu and Urdareanu, who have been accused by the new Iron Guard government of crimes against the state.)

3 BRITISH ARMED SHIPS TORPEDOED, GERMANS REPORT

Claim Total of 35,414 Tons for U-Boat.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—Three British ships, totaling 35,414 tons, have been sunk by a single German submarine and five others, including a destroyer and 19,000-ton merchantman, have been badly damaged by Nazi bombers, the high command announced today.

It listed the U-Boat's victims as the auxiliary cruisers Laurentic, 18,724 tons, and the Patroclus, 11,314 tons, and the armed merchantman Casanare, 5,376 tons.

The submarine was in command of Lieutenant Commander Kretschmer, 28 years old, the communiqué noted, with the observation that the tonnage sunk by his craft had thus been increased to 217,198. He is the second U-Boat commander to top the 200,000-ton mark.

May Be Windsor Castle.
There were no details of the sinkings or the fate of the crews, nor was the 19,000-ton merchantman identified. Informed German sources, however, said a single plane had made a direct hit on the 19,141-ton steamer Windsor Castle several hundred miles west of Ireland.

The other ships, listed merely as "one destroyer, a patrol boat, a large merchantman, and a freighter," were reported by the high command to have been hit off Kinnaird head, on the east coast of Scotland.

Nazi planes, informed sources said, bombed two 6,000-ton merchantmen in a convoy and both vessels began listing. The others fled to the shelter of the coast, they reported.

Many Sailors Rescued.
LONDON, Nov. 4.—The admiralty today acknowledged the loss of the armed merchant cruisers Laurentic and Patroclus, but made no mention of the Casanare.

The admiralty said 52 officers and 316 seamen were rescued from the Laurentic and 33 officers and 200 men from the Patroclus. Losses were not announced.

The admiralty announced the sinking of the trawler Tiburness after a brush with enemy aircraft. Casualties were not reported.

The admiralty reported that two more Italian submarines had been destroyed by British light naval forces. [The Italians disclosed on Sunday that two of their submarines had "failed to return to their base."] Converted Passenger Liners.

The Laurentic and Patroclus were converted passenger liners and, like the Casanare, were registered in Liverpool. The Laurentic, operated by the Cunard-White Star line, was built in 1927 and ran between Montreal and Britain. The Patroclus and the Casanare were operated respectively by the China Mutual Steamship company and Elders and Fyffes, limited.

By coincidence, a British auxiliary cruiser also named Laurentic was sunk by a mine off the north coast of Ireland during the world war, Jan. 28, 1917, while carrying millions in gold to the United States. About 260 men were lost.

Much of the bullion was recovered in later years, the salvage work continuing until 1934, when $3,000,000 was recovered by private operators.

Hitler Orders 'Blackout' Turned Into a 'Blueout'

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
BERLIN, Nov. 4.—The blackout in Germany became a "blueout" today by Adolf Hitler's personal order. Lights in street cars, buses, trains, automobiles, street corners, and every place where illumination is exposed must be changed to dark blue. Heretofore, the blackout in Berlin has not been severe, but it was claimed the present lighting aids enemy airmen.

GREEKS CAPTURE ITALIANS; SEIZE ALBANIAN PEAK

Part of Force of 4,000 Men Taken—Athens.

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 5, Tuesday (AP).—The capture of part of 4,000 Italian troops sent into Greece to cut communications was reported early today as Greece's shock troops announced they had seized another hill in Albania and taken a quantity of Italian war material.

[Belgrade, Jugoslavia, dispatches said the Greek general staff reported the capture of 30 tanks, and Greek sources in Belgrade said their northern army was in possession of mountain heights surrounding 30,000 Italians.]

The Greek defenders who are carrying the war to Italian conquered Albania were said to have thrust forward more than six miles in bayonet charges to seize the heights of Mount Morava in Albania, commanding the road to the Italian base of Koritza.

Seize Supplies Tossed from Air.
Advices from the front said that the Greeks had seized supplies thrown from the air by Italian planes in an attempt to relieve Fascist soldiers sent into Greece to disrupt communications. The number of prisoners taken there was not disclosed, but advances from the front said the surrender of the remaining force is pending.

Fighting flared all up and down the 100-mile Albanian border, but the most intense struggles were declared to be at the two ends, around Mount Morava on the north and in the vicinity of the Kalamas river on the south.

The Greeks counterattacked the Italian invaders north of the Kalamas river after withstanding an Italian tank charge. To the northeast, in the Florina sector, the Italians launched a counterattack reportedly without success.

Cling to Positions.
Nearer the coast, on the Epirus front where the Italians were said to have made their only important gains in eight days of subdued blitzkrieg, the Greeks claimed they were holding their strongly fortified positions against one Fascist thrust after another.

[Greek advices from Djedjelija, Jugoslav town on the Greek-Jugoslav frontier, said the Italians launched a mighty attack on the Epirus front during the day but failed to budge the Greeks.]

The Greek high command said the enemy had bombed repeatedly many towns and villages in Greece, but that "our aviation successfully bombed and machine-gunned concentrations of tanks and troops at different localities."

Five Italian Planes Downed.
The Greeks said five Italian planes were shot down during the day, while one Greek plane failed to return.

Reports from Salonika said the Italians raided that important Aegean port city twice during the day and three Italian planes were shot down. The Greeks said Italian planes also bombed Piraeus, Volo, and Kastoria, and charged that all raids were directed against the civilian population.

[A Reuters, British news agency, advised from Athens said the arrival of the 1,300-ton Greek escort vessel Wryneck at Piraeus, port of Athens—possibly carrying additional British reinforcements to Greece—had been announced officially. The British already have confirmed the landing of some troops on the island of Crete.]

ITALIANS BOMB GREEKS

ROME, Nov. 4.—Italian warplanes bombed and machine-gunned Greek troop concentrations, batteries, and trenches while the Fascist legions continued their advance on all fronts, a Stefani, Italian news agency, correspondent reported tonight from the Albanian frontier.

The report to the official Italian news agency said that Italian planes continued bombing Greek positions along the mountainous country, troop concentrations in villages, and military trains.

The high command declared the drive down the road to Janina, in northwestern Greece, was going forward with the support of bombing squadrons.

The high command said its bombers had raided the port of Salonika and the fortress on the island of Corfu, and declared five Greek planes were shot down in an air fight over Salonika Saturday.

KIEL AND NAPLES HEAVILY BOMBED IN BRITISH RAIDS

LONDON, Nov. 5, Tuesday (AP).—Aerial blows at the Rome-Berlin axis from Kiel to Naples were reported by the British air ministry last night.

British airmen bombed Naples again, driving thru low clouds and antiaircraft fire to rain explosives on the oil tanks of the free customs district of Poggioreale and close to the industrial port's main railway station, the air ministry said.

[A British radio broadcast heard in New York said Naples was attacked again Monday night and Rome was under raid alarm for two hours.]

For 70 minutes another group of British bombers flew over the German naval base at Kiel. Earlier Sunday, British planes operating in daylight attacked Flushing, Holland, and the airbase at Soesterberg.

Single, high flying Nazi air raiders bombed London through the dark hours last night and today. Scotland, Wales, the English midlands, and the southwest also were attacked. Flying in the face of fierce antiaircraft fire, the Germans attacked on a fairly heavy scale, but apparently did not inflict serious damage, British reports said.

The prolonged raid on London followed the quietest 24 hours since the all-out attacks began Sept. 7.

BRITAIN CONFIRMS ITS TROOPS HAVE LANDED IN CRETE

Scope of Military Aid to Greece Concealed.

LONDON, Nov. 4 (AP).—The landing of British troops on the Greek island of Crete was confirmed officially today, but beyond a laconic announcement to that effect the British people knew virtually nothing of the scope of their aid to embattled Greece.

A Greek spokesman said it was believed that British forces in Crete included land, naval, and air units, but this was not officially verified.

Some light is expected to be shed in a public statement by Prime Minister Churchill when parliament meets again.

Criticizes News Concealment.
An editorial in the Daily Mail noted that the first disclosure of the Crete landing came from Athens and observed that "concealment of information from the enemy can become an obsession."

[The Belgrade newspaper Pravda quoted Greek newspapers as saying that British aid to Greece will include three army divisions, 45,000 men.]

Diplomatic and military observers here were mystified by indications of impotence in the Italian attack in Greece after months of preparation and a full week of fighting. A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from Athens quoted unofficial reports that the Greeks had taken the offensive on the southern front in the past 48 hours and were advancing at some points into Albania.

Hint Duce Relies on Air.
On the northern part of the front, British military circles said it was reported that the Greeks, "generally speaking, advanced two to three kilometers—a mile to two miles—from the Florina sector down to the Pindus mountains."

Apart from the resistance put up by the Greeks, observers suggested the Italians' failure to crack Greece's border defenses might be explained by the possibility that Premier Mussolini of Italy is relying on air raids to break civilian morale and set the stage for installation of a government willing to hand over the strategic points demanded by the Italian ultimatum.

SEWING CHICAGO FOR 93 YEARS

JAPAN PREPARES 10 YEAR PLAN FOR ECONOMIC EMPIRE

Outlines Aims in China and Manchukuo.

TOKIO, Nov. 5, Tuesday (AP).—The broad outlines of a 10-year program thru which Japan hopes to make herself self-sufficient by clutching Manchukuo and China to her as economic allies were published by the government today.

Details were not disclosed, but the main lines as published by the cabinet information bureau indicated at least the rôle Japan intends to assign to China, if and when she can be made to surrender her economic direction to Japan.

Briefly, Japan is to be the industrial unit of the bloc with the other two feeding her with raw materials and providing markets for her products.

Points of Program.

The announcement summarized the program thus:

1. Japan is to operate the heavy industries and send skilled workers to direct any industries which Manchukuo and China may retain.
2. Manchukuo is to produce enough basic staples and supplies for the entire bloc; large scale, government-fostered immigration from Japan is to raise Manchukuo's population and lessen Japan's pressure of numbers.
3. Chinese unskilled labor is to be used to develop mines and other natural resources.

Japan, with her colonies, has a population of 100,000,000; Manchukuo about 35,000,000, China about 450,000,000.

Japs Moving Out.

HONGKONG, Nov. 4 (AP).—Indications that the Japanese army is shortening its lines drastically by withdrawing from several occupied zones, especially in south and central China, increased tonight.

The abandonment of its zone of occupation in Kwangsi province, south China, apparently was just about completed, and Chinese columns were said to be approaching Yanchow, Kwangtung province port. Just off the coast the Japanese abandoned Walchow, an island they had used as a naval base.

Chinese dispatches reported that similar withdrawals were in preparation in the Chungshan district, across the Pearl river estuary from Hongkong; from the port of Swatow, northeast of Hongkong, and from Yochow, strategic river port in northern Hunan province, southwest of Hankow.

Last week the Japanese were reported quitting Ichang, on the Yangtze river west of Hankow, high water mark of their Yangtze valley drive.

Japs Leave Hongkong.

Chinese reports said that the majority of Japan's garrison in Canton, chief city of south China, might be leaving. Last week the Japanese south China command announced it was withdrawing from Nanning, Kwangsi capital.

Departure of Japanese residents from Hongkong has been accelerated. More than 50 Japanese, including families of the Japanese consular staff, boarded a liner today.

In Chungking the Central Daily News, organ of the Chinese government, suggested that the Japanese withdrawals might be preparation for "a desperate Japanese attempt" to seize Singapore or the Dutch East Indies "before joint British-American pressure in the Pacific causes Japan's collapse."

PARIS SUBURBS TO WIPE OUT LAST SIGNS OF OLD ERA

BY ALEX SMALL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.] PARIS, Oct. 30 (via Berlin) (Delayed).—The prefect of the department of Seine-et-Oise, which surrounds Paris and has its center at Versailles, has taken steps to wipe out symbolic reminders of the "old régime."

He has ordered all municipal authorities under his jurisdiction to take down the signs and change the names of streets that bear the names of former Premiers Leon Blum and Edouard Daladier, or of any other person now held in "administrative detention" in unoccupied France.

The prefect also ordered that inscriptions expressing sympathy for communism be effaced from walls and buildings.

The street names in question were bestowed after the election of 1936 during the hysteria of the Popular Front movement.

BRITISH LAUNCH DRIVE TO EXCEED NAZI PRODUCTION

Goal Held Possible in Six Months.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Britain today launched a drive to increase production, mobilize every available machine tool for the production of war supplies, and reorganize the food control administration.

The ministry of supply began a survey to insure that every machine tool in the country is used for vital production.

Industrial Superiority Forecast. Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, addressing 9,000 factory hands in the Midlands, urged intensification of the output to "avenge fellow workers killed or wounded in the German blitzkrieg. He predicted that Britain would exceed Germany's productive capacity in six months.

While Bevin was appealing to the workers, manufacturers who had expanded their plants at the government's request were complaining of a shortage of skilled workers. They demanded that Bevin wield his power to compel workers to take up jobs wherever ordered.

Coal Shortage Assailed. Newspapers voiced a strong protest against a coal shortage said to exist in many districts. A breakdown in transport was blamed.

Two new divisional food officers in the London area were appointed as complaints were made that lemons and onions, the prices of which have been put under control, suddenly were scarce in the stores. It was suggested wholesalers were holding up stocks.

One hundred girl graduates from schools set up by the London transport board took jobs as bus conductors.

POPE TO STAY IN VATICAN DESPITE AIR RAID ALARMS

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 4 (AP).—Pope Pius XII, it is determined to remain in the Vatican despite new air raid alarms in Rome, it was reported unofficially tonight. A Vatican source said the Pope probably would protest if Rome is bombed because of the many valuable church properties in the city.

It was said that the pontiff finally has agreed to work to proceed on a personal shelter.

Ninety tons of steel are being used in the shelter, which will have its own heating and light plants, a small bedroom, library, kitchenette, and a prayer corner. Also, it will be built so it might be sealed against gas. It probably will not be completed before the end of the year.

English Passenger Train Derailed; 24 Die; 59 Hurt

LONDON, Nov. 4 (AP).—Twenty-four persons were killed and 59 injured today by derailment of the locomotive and several coaches of a Penzance-bound London passenger train in Somerset. Most of the casualties were said to have been soldiers, sailors, and airmen. A railway official said the derailment was accidental.

EYES ARE MISTY ALL AROUND AS NAVY SHIPS SAIL

It's Wind, Gobs Say; Kin Admit to Tears.

Wives and sweethearts kissed starwart men of the naval reserve and waved them a brave farewell yesterday. And four gray navy vessels put out in the grayer mist of Lake Michigan, bound for patrol duty on the Atlantic.

Flags fluttered in the breeze from the Naval Armory dock at the foot of Randolph street. Handkerchiefs fluttered, too, but they were damp with tears of the relatives who had come to see the sailors depart.

Fathers and mothers were in the crowd, and sisters and brothers, and they wept as they tried to smile at the men who were leaving. Some of the sailors had red eyes, too, but their comrades blamed it on the wind.

Other Vessels to Follow.

The four ships that began the voyage thru the lakes to the sea yesterday were the first of the 9th naval district's entire fleet of 18 training vessels which have been ordered to the Brooklyn navy yards. They were the U. S. S. YP-26, YP-28, YP-31, and SC-64.

Four more leave the armory at 8 a. m. today. The others will cast off in a week or two. Six hundred men of the naval reserve, 200 of them Chicagoans, are going with the fleet. Capt. E. A. Evers, squadron commander of the 9th district reserves, said the ships will be armed and equipped at Brooklyn for winter patrol duty from Boston south. Depth charges will be carried by all of them.

A Salesman Takes Command. One of the ships that will leave this morning is the YP-68, commanded by Lieut. (j. g.) Robert H. Wanless, 29 years old, who in civilian life was a salesman for the Dwight Brothers Paper company. His attractive wife, Mary Jayne, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Minor, 7450 North Arcturian avenue, and his folks, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Wanless, were down to say good-by.

Lieut. Wanless explained that the YP-68 had been scheduled to leave with the first section but had been delayed. His visitors were shown thru the craft with its snug quarters for two officers and the 10 enlisted men, its galley, and the bridge.

"There's more room than you'd expect, isn't there?" the young officer asked proudly. "Her two 100 horse power gasoline engines will turn her up to between 16 and 18 knots and when she's refitted in the (Brooklyn) navy yard, she'll have teeth."

"The navy's a nice place, and if I'm stationed in Brooklyn, I'll be able to send for Mary Jayne. I hate to leave the folks but there are some things you've got to do."

FIVE BOOKIES PAY FINES. Five men pleaded guilty to charges of accepting race bets and paid fines of $12.50 each yesterday to Judge Leon Edelman in South State Street Police court.

STRICT CENSORSHIP OVER FORT DIX NEWS IS DENIED BY COLONEL

Fort Dix, N. J., Nov. 4 (Special).—Reports that strict censorship exists at this army post were denied tonight by Col. Herbert D. Forrest, chief of staff of the 44th division.

The denial followed publication of reports that correspondents' releases were censored, unauthorized officers were not permitted to speak to newspaper men and that enlisted men were encouraged to write home and present a favorable impression of the camp.

The colonel asserted the post has set up a division of public relations office with a public relations officer in each of the division's regiments and brigades and that these officers are required to make every effort to gather items of news value and that authorized newspaper men may get items of ordinary news value. Items of questionable nature will not be supplied until authorized by the division publicity officer.

"News correspondents," he said, "are extended every courtesy to interview specific persons or inspect parts of the area with the qualified officer remaining with them during the interview or inspection."

Dozen Greek Ships Sail for Japan at Tokio's Plea

TOKIO, Japan, Nov. 4 (AP).—The foreign office announced today that a dozen Greek freighters were continuing toward Japan at Tokio's request. The ships, carrying cargoes to Japan, took refuge in neutral ports when war broke out between Greece and Japan's axis partner, Italy.

The announcement said Japan had assured Greece the vessels would "encounter no difficulties" in Japanese waters.

U.S. GETS LAND FOR BIG ANTI-AIRCRAFT SCHOOL IN SOUTH

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4 (AP).—Plans for acquisition of 360,000 acres of land for a huge new anti-aircraft training center near Hinesville, Ga., were announced today by the war department.

The department also disclosed plans for purchase of some 80,000 other acres in small parcels for expansion of Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Devens, Mass., and Fort Bliss, Tex. The program also includes acquisition of 10,640 acres for an ammunition storage depot in Calhoun county, Ala., and 10 acres for a radio beacon station near Amarillo, Tex.

DRAFT INDUCTION SCHOOL OPENS AT FORT SHERIDAN

A 10 day school will begin today at Fort Sheridan for the officers and men who will operate the induction stations at which draftees of the 6th corps area will enter military service. The personnel for each of the area's three states—Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin—includes 12 medical officers, 2 dental officers, 5 line officers, and 36 enlisted men. These groups will man the induction stations in Chicago, Detroit, and Milwaukee, and in addition will provide the officers and men for the rest of the 13 induction stations in the corps area. Illinois stations outside Chicago are to be located in Peoria, Salem, and East St. Louis.

FIRST RADIO CAMPAIGN PLEA IN ENGLISH MADE FOR PUERTO RICO VOTE

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Nov. 4. —For the first time in memory a campaign speech in the English language was broadcast tonight to "continental" American voters living on this island. The speech was made by Dr. A. Fernos Isern, candidate of the Popular Democrat party, for the position of resident commissioner in Washington, D. C. He outlined the party's program for "bread, land and liberty."

Old time politicians said they could not remember an appeal in English ever being made before. Senator Martinez Nadal, chief of the coalition party, which now controls the legislature, today predicted the election of Resident Commissioner Soliver Fagan and the capture of all seven senatorial districts and 63 of 75 municipalities.

500 Naturalized French Citizens Shorn of Rights

VICHY, France, Nov. 4 (AP).—The government annulled today the naturalization of 500 persons given French citizenship since Aug. 10, 1927. A communique said the group was composed mostly of émigrés from central Europe whose "assimilation would be particularly difficult."

VOTE EARLY

There is every indication that Chicago will cast the largest vote in its history. That means danger of congestion at the polls late in the day. Don't take a chance of being crowded out. Don't put off voting until the last moment and then discover that unforeseen circumstances have robbed you of what may well be the most important vote of your lifetime. Go to the polls early. Vote before you go to work. The law allows every employe two hours during election day in which to vote. Take those two hours in the morning.

Vote early. Then you will be sure of voting.

AT THE LAST MINUTE.

There may be persons who are still making a last minute decision. Such voters must have been much troubled by doubts through the campaign, and it may be assumed that these doubts question more the continued support of Mr. Roosevelt than they question an inclination in favor of Mr. Willkie.

The doubtful voters probably have been endeavoring to reconcile conflicting sentiments and to overcome some increasing foreboding that will not quite subside.

The wise course for them would be to resolve doubt in favor of national security. They must know that there is no indispensable man. It would be a misfortune to the nation, incalculable in any view of the future, to adopt the doctrine of indispensability and reject the doctrine of limited tenure. The adoption of the one doctrine and the discarding of the other would throw the future of America into a degree of uncertainty and hazard regarding which no assurance could be given the American people. There is no justification for doing this. The man who asks that it be done has been unable to lead the United States out of its domestic troubles and he has been unable to keep it out of foreign troubles. At home he has left the national problems unsolved and abroad he has made many new ones.

Last minute doubts should be resolved against him. The risk is too great. Why without reason take the chance?

THIS IS NO JOSH.

Senator Josh Lee's bill for the arbitrary conscription of every citizen's wealth properly belongs in a burlap bag. But don't be misled by the senator's name. This is no Josh. It was not written for Mr. Wintergreen or Mr. Throttlebottom or to be sung with "Love Is Sweeping the Country." It wasn't written for "I'd Rather Be Right" or for a Gridiron dinner. Senator Lee wrote it for passage by congress and it is on the senate calendar, sent there by a vote of 12 to 2 in the senate military affairs committee.

Lee's bill would authorize the President without further ado—on declaring an emergency—to force every citizen to schedule his wealth. Every person having as much as $1,000 in value would be compelled to buy a government 50 year bond paying one per cent interest. If he did not have the money he would be obliged to borrow it. The government would lend it to him at four per cent, taking his scheduled wealth as collateral. The bill is crazy, but 12 senators already have been crazy enough to recommend its passage.

THE UNWRITTEN LAW.

Mr. Willkie, in a statement issued Sunday, said that if he should be elected his first message to congress would contain a recommendation that an amendment to the constitution limiting tenure to two terms be submitted for adoption to the people. He referred to the unsatisfactory replies he had to the questions he asked Mr. Roosevelt, and remarked that the attempt to set aside the unwritten law should be countered by a constitutional declaration of it.

The unwritten law was supposed to be sufficient. In some respects it was to be preferred to constitutional limitation, not because it would permit a violation of any fancied emergency conceived by any ambitious man but because it relied upon the character of men entrusted with the Presidency and the sound sense of the people. So long as the usage prevailed it was a gratifying testimonial to the permanence of American political ways and the dependability of the American idea regarding the chief executive.

The attempt to violate the law has been so dangerous that Mr. Willkie thinks it is time now to declare it in such a fashion that an ambitious man can't use the power of office again to perpetuate himself. If the third term candidate succeeds, the need of such a constitutional prohibition for the future will be even more plainly marked.

There is now a resolution for the amendment in the senate judiciary committee, a subcommittee of which has been holding hearings during the campaign. A survey of American opinion has been made by the subcommittee and it is almost unanimously in favor of the limitation constitutionally declared.

The senate in 1928 passed such a resolution and the record of the debate reveals many of Mr. Roosevelt's present day supporters, including La Follette, Norris, Barkley, and others, in vigorous and almost passionate devotion to the two-term limitation.

For this campaign they have deserted their principles but they might be willing to return to them after today.

A FOE OF INTOLERANCE.

Said Mr. Willkie in his Madison Square Garden speech last Saturday night:

"I repudiate now and forever any and all men and women, individually or collectively, who practice or promote racial or religious intolerance or persecution."

That was no new policy with Mr. Willkie. Twenty years ago, when he was not a national figure, when he had no faintest notion of seeking votes for any office, he fought the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Willkie was fighting the Klan on principle at about the same time that Mr. Roosevelt's appointee to the Supreme court, Mr. Justice Hugo Black, was accepting a life membership in the Klan.

At the beginning of this campaign Mr. Willkie specifically repudiated the support of intolerant elements and did not hesitate to name them and denounce them by name. On Saturday night he told the American people that he has no use for communists, fascists, or Nazis and doesn't want their support on any terms. His whole record, public and private, proves the sincerity of this declaration of his.

Mr. Roosevelt and some of his satellites pretend in the face of this record that the forces of intolerance are with Willkie. If Mr. Willkie had appointed the Ku Kluxer to the Supreme court; if Mr. Willkie had filled the government offices in Washington with communists and fellow travelers; if Mr. Willkie had a political debt to pay for the undivided support of the southern states where intolerance is chronic, this charge might make sense. But the facts are precisely the reverse. It is Mr. Roosevelt who did these things and has these obligations.

It is not Mr. Willkie who believes in an all-powerful, centralized government. That is Mr. Roosevelt's doctrine. It is also Mr. Hitler's and Mr. Stalin's doctrine. There can be no persecutions and oppressions in this country so long as the constitution imposes its restraints upon government. It is only by destroying these restraints that oppression of minorities can be achieved.

Those who came to America because in America men of all races and creeds can live in peace and prosper will do themselves and their children infinite harm by encouraging the concentration of governmental power in one man. A constitutional government cannot be a persecuting government; a dictatorial government is almost certain sooner or later to become a persecuting government.

WHISTLING PAST THE GRAVEYARD.

Jim McDermott, the Big Wind from the Stockyards, huffed and puffed Sunday night over the radio, but he didn't blow any one's house down. He was still huffing and puffing when he ran out of radio time, but the only thing in his vicinity that was tottering was the rotten Kelly-Nash vote stealing machine he was trying to hold up.

The Big Wind betrayed the machine's desperation when he went on the air. He was whistling past the graveyard. He knows, as the machine knows, that this election isn't going to be stolen in Chicago. That's what had him so rolled up, had him howling that any photographers that came into his ward to catch repeaters are going to have their cameras broken.

There aren't going to be any cameras broken. There aren't going to be any heads broken. There aren't going to be any votes stolen. The Big Wind knows it. Jake Avery knows it. Hinky Dink knows it. Johnny Touthy and Bill Connors and all the rest of the vote fraud barons know it. This is the election they can't steal. It isn't going to be stolen because the decent people of Chicago won't let it be stolen. There are a lot of those decent people down in Jim McDermott's own ward. The decent people are a majority in every ward in this city. They're sick and tired of hoodlums and repeaters and short pencil artists operating on election day.

The hoodlums and repeaters and short pencil artists know it, too. They know that if they get out of line this time they are going to jail. They know that the Big Wind and Kelly-Nash can't save them. That's why they are going to be good boys and girls today. They haven't reformed. They're just scared. They know the aroused citizenry has seen to it that every polling place in the city will be manned against fraud by well trained watchers.

That's why this is going to be a clean election. That's why the Big Wind is huffing and puffing. He knows it can't be stolen and that means that the crooked Kelly-Nash machine is whipped.

Editorial of the Day

AN EXERCISE IN FUTILITY.
[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

Unwittingly, Norman Thomas has given some American voters a very self-satisfying way of escaping their duty on election day. These people would shudder at the mere suggestion of staying away from the polls. But they might as well do just that instead of marking their ballots for the Socialist candidate. It would be more honest.

At best, these voters indulge in an exercise in futility—a bit of escapism. They find it difficult to make a decision under our two party system. They have this against the Republican candidate and that against the Democratic candidate. They lack the moral courage to make the compromises that are always necessary when two men are expected to represent all the gradations of opinion among 130,000,000 citizens.

If these lazy voters really believed in Mr. Thomas and in his platform, it would be a very different matter. It will be a sad day for our democracy when minority parties and unorthodox views can no longer command support. But these people do not agree with the Socialist candidate. They would quiver like aspen leaves if they believed that there was the remotest possibility of a Socialist victory.

They mark their "X" before the name of Mr. Thomas just because they are supremely confident that it will have not the slightest practical effect. Then they go around thumping their chests and proclaiming their independence, their fearlessness. They talk about having cast a "protest" vote. Protest against what? It is to laugh! They have cast a lazy vote, a futile vote.

These are difficult times. They call for difficult decisions. More than ever, these decisions cannot be shirked. To go to the polls and vote for Mr. Thomas or any other minority candidate—without conviction in his convictions—is not fulfilling a citizen's duty. It is less than patriotic. It is hypocritical.

The chief trouble with the French vintage of 1940 is that it has too much Vichy in it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

(Adapted from "The Pilgrim's Progress," by John Bunyan, Part II.)

Just at the place where Taxpayer formerly was robbed there stood a man with his sword drawn and his face all over with blood. Then said Mr. Citizen, Who art thou? The man made answer, saying, I am one whose name is Willkie-for-Truth. I am a pilgrim, and am going to the White House. Now, as I was in my way there were three men did beset me, to-wit, Pay Roller and Class Hatred and Third Termite, and they drew upon me, and I also drew upon them. So we fell to it for the space of over four months. They have left upon me, as you see, some marks of their valor, and have also carried away some of mine.

CITIZEN—But here was great odds, three against one.

WILLKIE—'Tis true, but little or more are nothing to him that has the truth on his side.

CITIZEN—But you fought a great while; I wonder you were not weary. Thou shalt abide by us; come in and go out with us; for we are thy companions.

WILLKIE—Have you any things to ask me about my beginning to come on pilgrimage?

CITIZEN—Did they show you wherein this way is so dangerous?

WILLKIE—They told me of the slough of the New Deal, where Industry was well nigh smothered. They told me there were egg throwers standing ready in Deficit castle to defile them who should knock at the gate. They told me also of the three giants, Franklin the Glib, Tommy the Cork, and Harold the Ick. Besides, they said, you must go over the Valley of Election, where the way is full of snares, pits, traps, and gins. They told me of one Mr. Hoover, who was a pilgrim, and how he found his way so solitary in that valley, and also that Mr. Landon had like to have been starved there.

CITIZEN—And did none of these things discourage you?

WILLKIE—I believed, and therefore came out, got into the way, fought all that set themselves against me, and, by believing, am come to this place.

LAST WARNING.

I had collected words against my need; Bright, sharp ones with a cutting edge, And jewel-like ones to reflect the light, And words soft enough to wrap up a king's pride; And I said, I shall never lack for these.

Then fear flew out of a crimson sky

And my words were pebbles that rattled down the throat of a threatening fate, And I had only enough left to cry, Beware! My countrymen! Beware!

Else when this witches' dance is done, You'll hold the shriveled head Of one we love, upon a plate.

WHEEZING ALONG.

LET US spin backward the wheel of time and drop in on an English country doctor of a few generations ago. He is interviewing an old army sergeant who fought with Wellington against the legions of "Bony."

The grizzled veteran is telling his story: Now I tell yer it's me bellers and me chubbs. When I breezes in and out there is such a squeakin' and a yowlin' and a whisslin' as yer never heerd the like on. Then livery mornin' I have one of these yere coughin' fits till I can scarcely get me breath.

The physician replies: "Yes! I understand. Now then, tell me, do you cough at any other time of the day?"

"Yes, sur—deed I do. Every time I goes out into this yere cole ayr—me wind gets short and I busts forth somethin' orful."

After a few more questions the medical man prescribes a mixture of antimony, grindella, lobelia, ipecac, and about 20 other ingredients—a tablepoonful to be taken three times daily.

Most of us recognize the condition presented by the old pensioner. It is that common enemy of the elderly—bronchitis combined with emphysema. The lining of the trachea and bronchi has become chronically inflamed and the upward stream of mucus is retarded because so many of the cilia (whipls) with which the outer cells are normally provided—have been lost.

As we would expect, the malady advances slowly but persistently. There is usually a beginning attack of pneumonia or influenza with a troublesome cough which fails to test completely. For a time, periods of improvement alternate with those in which expectoration is profuse. Then it is that paroxysmal episodes of "barking" leave the patient breathless and the face deeply congested. Little wonder that the air sacs yield to the repeated pressure of the explosions and become stretched to the point where they cannot recover their elastic character. This is the type of emphysema characterized by asthmatic wheezing.

In some cases an actual change in the contour of the chest will be observed. It becomes more barrel-shaped, increasing in depth from back to front. The spine is likely to bend and the shoulders and ribs become hunched up as they were about to tip forward.

We must realize that this deformity is largely a postural defect—one that can be remedied by proper exercise, which will include emptying the inflated lungs. Furthermore, we can aid the patient to get rid of the accumulations on the same principle that we open an abscess. We must provide as much as is possible in assisting him to "raise the thick, tough exudate. A cough medicine that will render it more fluid is beneficial frequently.

A stout abdominal belt or binder to support the diaphragm and thus render breathing easier is recommended. Among the drugs suggested may be included potassium iodide, which has a tendency to thin the secretions. If the breath is foul and the sputum has a putrid odor, inhalations of steam to which menthol or tincture of benzoin is added will be of great value. Sleep may be far more comfortable with the atmosphere impregnated with moisture.

Most of these victims do unusually well with a change of climate. A visit of a month (during the colder season of the year) to a warm region may tide over what otherwise would be a distressing interval. Many find that they do well at home during the summer, but with the coming of autumn symptoms grow worse steadily.

The house should be as free from dust as possible, overexertion should be avoided, and stair climbing may be taken slowly and reduced to the minimum. I have no wish to deprive those accustomed to tobacco of their daily solace. On the other hand, when the air becomes filled with smoke particles they may set up enough commotion to provoke a siege.

FINGERNAIL TROUBLE.

M. M. writes: What is the cause of the fingernails splitting and tearing? What can be done to correct this condition?

REPLY.

The nails reflect the state of one's health. Your nutrition is probably not up to par. A balanced diet, to which nuttur has been added, may bring relief.

Certain maladies, such as ringworm and psoriasis, may disturb the structures. Polishes and strong soaps should be thought of.

You deserve two points apiece for correctly answering the first two problems below, and an extra point for solving the last question.

(a) In chipped ice and water your thermometer should read —
(b) In chipped ice sprinkled liberally with salt, the same thermometer should read approximately —

A THIRD TERM DEFEATED.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Like Col. Reynolds, I was at the Republican convention of 1880, on a Saturday when the nominating speeches were delivered. It was a significant occasion to me, then 23 years old, as I was to cast my first Presidential vote that fall.

I witnessed the dramatic entrance of Roscoe Conkling, the major-domo of the Grant forces, as he strode down the aisle with that "turkey gobble strut," as Blaine put it, a phrase which cost the latter the Presidency, along with another verbal boomerang, four years later.

Soon came another figure, sturdily stalking to his seat, paying no attention to the applause as Conkling did. It was James A. Garfield, the dark horse in the Presidential paddock. All afternoon the debate raged over the unit rule to bind the convention to the nominee, whoever he might be. Conkling, the plumed knight of this measure, was unhorsed by Garfield in a dignified appeal, free from rancor or personalities. It was easy to see, even to an amateur, that aside from the 38 delegates Conkling held superbly together for 36 ballots, the convention was Garfield-minded.

About 10 o'clock that night the roll of states began for nominations. There was no interest in the preliminary nominating speeches until New York was reached when Roscoe Conkling mounted the platform, stepped on a chair, and then on a table. What a man! He stood there, tall and imperious, and the audience was still as night, as with folded arms he repeated the now famous opening lines: "When asked what state he comes from."

At the mention of Appomattox, he touched the button that exploded in a genuine American demonstration. It was an eloquent, but not an effective speech. It irritated the convention as the speech of a man with a chip on his shoulders. The edge was taken off the speech by some one shouting out an unpleasant incident in Conkling's life in Washington. The Conkling ignored the interruption, it chilled the atmosphere so that the chariot wheels of his delivery dragged heavily.

There was one sentence in Conkling's speech that has stayed by me ever since, when he said Grant's fame rested "on the arduous greatness of things done." That, too, evoked generous applause.

The real test of an orator came when Ohio followed New York and Garfield rose to speak. He, too, stood on the table. If Conkling looked like Apollo, Garfield looked like Jove himself. His first sentence, in a tribute to Grant as a great and distinguished character, captured the convention, and proved him a master of as-

Vote Returns to Challenge Opera Tonight

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE excitement of the last few weeks will be climaxed tonight with every one's attention focused on the election returns, but this does not necessarily mean that politics will exclude all other interests.

Those who attend the performance of "La Traviata" at the Civic Opera house, for instance, will find that periodic election announcements will be made, and that the opera-going public will be posted on the returns from the time they enter the theater until after the last curtain call. An all-American cast, with Helen Jepson, James Melton, and John Charles Thomas in the leading roles, will sing.

Several dinner parties have been planned to precede the performance, among them those of Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, Mrs. Howard W. Fenton, and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham.

Tuesdays Designated Woman's Board Nights.

Among those who have subscriptions for Tuesday nights, which have been designated as woman's board nights, are Mrs. Charles H. Bosworth, Robert F. Carr, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, James Donnelly, and Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed.

Several who like their politics straight have planned dinner parties which will run well into the night. Among the gayest of these will be those of Stuart Logan, who entertains for Mrs. Jacob Baur on every Presidential election night; the James C. Heyworths, and the Stewart Harveys, all of whom will entertain at home. Another party will be given by Mrs. Welch Dickinson, who has invited some friends to drop in at her East Walton place apartment during the evening to celebrate or to bemoan, and to have a late supper. The Wilbur Calhoun Smiths also will have a party at their home.

Mrs. King Mitchell and the Clarence Prentices have organized a large Dutch treat party to be held at the Shoreacres. The Racquet club will echo with the congratulations and condolences of the Howard Linns, the Donald McPhersons, the Junior Byron Harveys, Mrs. Freeman Hinkley, and the Peter Morris, among others.

Ira Nelson Morris, Howard Willett Jr., Thorneil Broome, and Joseph Cummings are among those who have made reservations to partake of the cheer or consolation at the Tavern club. The Louis C. Sudlers, the James P. Humens, the John W. Roots, and the Shreve C. Badgers will find comfort at the Saddle and Cycle, while Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine and the L. Newton Perrys are among the 250 who will hear the returns at the Casino.

There'll Be No Election Returns at Orchestra Hall.

Those whose love of music exceeds their interest in politics (if there are such) can find a haven at Orchestra hall at the first in this season's series of concerts sponsored by the Adult Education council. No election returns will be announced during the concert, which has been dedicated to Dr. Frederick Stock and at which Rudolf Serkin will be artist. There is no law preventing any one taking a portable radio to the concert and hearing the returns during the intermission, however. The Charles B. Goodspeeds, the Charles Mayers, the Arthur Meekers, the William E. Vogelbacks, and the Carl B. Rodens are among those who have tickets for the concert.

The Lake Shore club has planned an election returns party which will add the final touch to the ladies' day program which will feature a fall fashion show under the direction of Princess Rostislav and Mrs. Lawrence Meeker.

A buffet supper and election returns are scheduled at the South Shore Country club, which will have its first formal dinner of the season, a red, white, and blue ball on Saturday. An election dinner will be served at the Chicago College club from 6 to 7:30 o'clock. A light buffet supper, dancing, a strolling orchestra, and "plenty of radio" will entertain the evening for members of the Sun-set ridge.

Russian Trio Concert Series Opens at Arts Club.

Before or after voting those women who always attend the Russian Trio's concerts every winter will go to the Arts club for the first of the series. It will start at 11:30 o'clock. The trio is composed of Nina Minchin, pianist; Ennio Bolognini, cellist, and Hans Muenzer, violinist.

Paul Leysach will present serious and humorous excerpts from French prose and poetry this afternoon before members of the Cercle Francais in the Fine Arts building. Mrs. Welch Dickinson and Mrs. Jefferson Jackson will preside at the tea table.

Miss Marie Louise Hulburd, president of the Cercle des Jeunes of the Alliance Francaise, and Miss Anne Stuart will be hostesses at the first meeting of the group at 3 o'clock today. Mrs. Maurice Landis will speak on "The Art of Good Eating."

The Donald McPhersons, who have taken an apartment at the Ambassador East for the winter, spend weekends at their home in Winnetka. Next Sunday they are giving a luncheon there for Miss Mary Hale and Howard F. Gillette Jr., who are being married on Nov. 16.

The Leeds Mitchells are giving a supper party Saturday night for their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crooks. Mr. Crooks is singing the tenor role in "Manon" that night at the opera.

In Service Club Revue

Miss Jane Mather and Miss Catherine Cohlgraff (right) are among the several dozen young women who will take part in the Service Club revue Saturday night in the Auditorium theater. Mrs. Robert E. Cavanaugh is president of the club and Mrs. Richard Vanderwerker is production chairman. Miss Jean Kellogg is her assistant.

Composer and Ambulance Driver.

William Walton, English composer, who is one of the distinguished group who are writing or have written compositions for Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra in celebration of the orchestra's jubilee this year, is driving an ambulance in London, but expects to have the new work in Dr. Stock's hands in December. A letter from London to Dr. Stock, which gave news of the progress of the piece, lay in the office of the London censor for six weeks. It was marked passed by Censor No. 5432, which helps give an idea of the number of censors employed. When war was declared, Censor No. 5432 immediately offered his services. He was told his value lay in his musicianship, but upon his insistence that he wanted to do war service, was put to work driving an ambulance.

Family Crisis.

Workers at the British War Relief shop at 615 North Michigan avenue are wondering what domestic crisis was precipitated by the arrival home of a merry and delightful old gentleman after his visit to the shop a few evenings ago. At the shop he dined unhesitatingly from table to table, picking up here an old picture frame, there a pair of silver candlesticks or a piece of china. He so obviously knew what he wanted that one of the volunteer staff finally made mention of it.

"Stuff donated by my wife," he said in explanation. "Used to belong to her mother-in-law," he added with a chuckle as he picked up his bundles to depart.

Chicago Opera Has Its Second Gala Evening

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

"Do you live at the opera house?" asked a fashionable matron, a patroness of all the arts, as we scurried around last night during the first intermission of "Tristan and Isolde." We answered her question by asking her if she hadn't been living there, too, over the weekend, for she had, of course. Every one who loves opera and ballet and is interested in furthering the cultural progress of Chicago, has spent the last three nights at the Civic Opera house; Saturday at the opera opening, Sunday at the ballet premiere, and last night at the first subscription performance of the season.

One of the most stunning women in the theater was Countess Bolognini who was wearing a gray-blue military cape over a soft pastel gown. She was so lovely in her severely cut cape with her gray hair arranged simply, that every one gazed as she entered. Another stunning outfit was that of Mrs. Perry Pennington, the former Helen Howell Barnes, who was wearing a gray lace gown, accented with gold and a long silver fox coat. A mantilla of the same sheer lace as her dress was fastened to her blonde hair by a single pink rose.

Another striking costume was that of Mrs. Edward Morse, who wore a delicate gold and white lamé with a short white fox cape. With her and Mr. Morris were their son, Bill, and Debutante Meredith Manning, tall and statuesque. She was all in white, too, but her gown was of wool with gold trimming. Her wrap was of white foxes, also.

Miss Nancy Blaine, who was with her mother, Mrs. Clark Lawrence, and Mr. Lawrence, accented her robin's egg blue faille tulle gown with antique gold and turquoise jewelry. Mrs. James Waller Rogers had chosen old jewelry, too, to set off her gown of soft cloth of silver. Her bracelet and necklace were of coral.

Mrs. Thomas Fisher (Ruth Pagel) was looking uncommonly smart in a black velvet gown with a heart shaped, off the shoulder neckline. She and Mr. Fisher and the Leander McCormicks were guests in the Leon Mordicks' box. Mrs. Edw. Nelson Morris had Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Proxmire, Mrs. Lloyd Laffin, and William B. Edwards with her. Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine and Mrs. John Crerar were hostesses to Mrs. Leroy Fuller and Mrs. Charles W. Dempster.

Countess Bolognini, the count and their daughter, Miss Marianna, and John B. Morse were with Mrs. Donald R. McLennan. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown and Mr. and Mrs. George Ebbert were the box guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Belin Veehess. Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Kirk had Mrs. Carleton Palmer of New York, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, the Howard W. Fentons, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse, and Richard Pleasant with them.

A few of the many others in the audience were Mrs. Edwin P. Dewes and her daughter, Mrs. Richard Juergens, Robert Allerton, Mrs. Moise Dreyfus, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Ganz, Mrs. Norval Pierce, Mrs. Thomas Heed, Mrs. Leo Nicolson, Mrs. Otho F. Ball, John Palmer, Mrs. Frank Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Weymouth Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Fleming, Mrs. James Melton, whose husband will sing tonight, Mrs. Peter Mero, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mme. Carrell, the James McMullins, the Henry Webers, the Warner Robinsons, Miss Mary Paul Welling, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. John Drum, the James G. Shakkans, Miss Denise Root, Hizi Hoyke, the Japanese soprano, and Fortunato Gallo.

WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Warren of 4941 Kimbark avenue announce the marriage on Nov. 2 of their daughter, Mrs. Louise Warren Treman, to J. Lakim Baldrige of New York. Mr. Baldrige and his bride will reside in New York and at Burnt House, Warwick West, Bermuda.

Mrs. Michael J. Taheny of 5361 Paterson avenue announces the marriage on Oct. 5 of her daughter, Lucy, to George R. Stucka, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Stucka of 3426 Drummond place. The ceremony took place in St. Bartholomew's church.

Looking & Hollywood

By John Chapman

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 4.—Under the new setup at 20th Century-Fox, Darryl Zanuck will devote himself to his own picture production schedule; Sol Wurtzel will handle his own pictures independently of Zanuck's responsibility, and Bill Goetz, representing the money, will have more of a say in affairs of policy. This is supposed to be a putting into effect of an arrangement which has existed in theory a long time. . . . Funny new yarn about a director who has been masterminding an outdoor picture. He ordered a buffalo stampede and his underlings ran one up for him. The herd was thundering beautifully past the cameras when the microphone yelled, "Cut, cut!" Then he explained to an assistant, "I want the buffalo to look from right to left, not left to right."

A minor executive of one of the big studios was given a new office which had plain plaster walls. He was told he could have any kind of decoration he liked, and what would he like? "O," he said, "picketed pine, I guess."

In a couple of days the wizards of the carpenter shop had made a beautiful colonial room of random width boards, and when it was finished the head of the shop showed it to the new tenant. The minor executive was impressed, not having expected the real stuff in a land where homes are made of chicken wire.

"I thought you'd just use paper," he said.

"That's all right," said the shop head. "We can paint it to look like paper."

Ed Dearing had made a career out of pinching Hollywood's glamour girls—but in a nice way. He's the dean of the screen's motorcycle cops. His first pinch was the late Mabel Normand in a Charlie Chase comedy in 1925 or so. Since then he has been chasing, scolding and arresting Joan Crawford, Irene Dunne, Claudette Colbert, Carole Lombard, Fay Wray, Kay Francis, Lana Turner and many others. Right now he's the man who makes Ann Sothern forget she's a lady by arresting her for stealing a new Ayres' super-roader in "Mistie Was a Lady." (The super-roader, incidentally, is one that Clark Gable owned for a few weeks and sold because it was too flashy. Metro is renting it from an auto livery for the picture.)

Mme. Flagstad Reveals Again Wonder Voice

"TRISTAN AND ISOLDE."

[Music drama in three acts. Words and music by Richard Wagner. Presented by the Chicago Opera company in the Civic Opera house, Monday, Nov. 4, 1940.]

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," probably the most hectic and stirring expression in all music of that turbulent thing which man has named the tender passion, was performed at the Civic Opera house last night in the torrential manner to which we are now accustomed. This was the first presentation of the Chicago Opera company's six week subscription season.

The Monday night audience—dazzlingly gowned and jewelled and tall-coated as it was—saw and heard the two persons who will probably go down in history as the standard Tristan and Isolde of this era.

Kirsten Flagstad, the Isolde, surprised us again (altho past experiences should have prepared us for it) with the apparently unlimited vocal resources which she possesses. Her voice commanded the orchestra imperiously. It rang thru the vast opera house as easily as it might thru your living room. It was cuttlingly brilliant one minute, bright and soft as gold the next.

And Mme. Flagstad revealed again that wonderful gift she has for making things sound important. When she gets hold of some particularly noble phrase she is able to convey triumphantly that impression of great things happening to great people. No one, you would be willing to swear, ever suffered so bitterly or knew such overwhelming ecstasy as Isolde.

Lauritz Melchior, as Tristan, sang in the heroic manner proper to the part. His voice, too, compassed with out apparent effort the big epic phrases in which the music drama is so rich. He, like Mme. Flagstad, has an additional talent which is a valuable one for Wagnerian singers—the ability to stand stock still for long periods and yet continue to convey an impression of tenseness and drama.

Enid Sazantho, the evening's Brangäne, has a genius for saying the most unpleasant things in the most beautiful, beautiful manner. And since she has virtually nothing pleasant to say in the whole opera, we had many chances last night to exult in her dark, brooding voice colorings, and dire phrasings.

Douglas Beattie, who has become a major artist right under our eyes these last few years, dealt nobly and sonorously with King Mark's music. Mack Harrell made a successful debut as Melot, putting a most expressive little snarl into his voice. George Casplicki was his usual restrained, musicianly self as Kurvenal. Edwin McArthur, considering that he had a new chorus and a partly new orchestra to contend with, did a creditable job as conductor. By the way, in "Tristan's" first act the naked ear can hardly tell the new men's chorus from the old.

Friends of Drama to Hold Autumn Party Tomorrow

Friends of the Drama will hold their annual autumn party and guest day at the Union League club tomorrow at 12 o'clock. Miss Julie Hayden of the cast of "Time of Your Life," J. C. Thompson, business manager of the Chicago Opera company, and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, chairman of the women's board of the opera, will be special guests.

Here Is Story of Opera Being Sung Tonight

Here is a synopsis of the opera "La Traviata" to be presented tonight by the Chicago Opera company. It is suggested that persons unfamiliar with the story, who are planning to attend the performance, clip it out and take it with them to the Civic Opera house. It will greatly increase their enjoyment.

"LA TRAVIATA."

Opera in four acts. Music by Giuseppe Verdi. Libretto by Francesco Piave, after "La Dame aux Camélias," by Alexandre Dumas the younger. The scene is laid in and near Paris about 1830.

Act 1.—A brilliant party is in progress in the glittering salon of Violetta, a beautiful courtesan. Alfredo Germont, who has met Violetta for the first time on this particular evening, sings a spirited drinking song, in which Violetta and the other guests soon join. As the song finishes, Violetta suddenly faints, but quickly recovers. This, as the story will reveal later, is the first forewarning of consumption. The guests make a move to go, but Violetta urges them to continue dancing. While they are in the ballroom, Alfredo remains behind to confess his love to Violetta—a love he began to feel long before he had met her. Soon the guests return from the ballroom, to say good night. When all have gone, Violetta sings a soliloquy, in which at first she takes Alfredo's love seriously, and then decides to try to treat it lightly.

Act 2.—For some time before the opening of the act Violetta and Alfredo have lived happily together in a suburban villa. Alfredo enters, sings an aria describing his high spirits, and departs. Giorgio Germont, Alfredo's father, comes to call on Violetta. While he is taken aback to discover that she is no longer the worldly courtesan of whom he had heard, he fulfills the original purpose of his visit, endeavoring to persuade Violetta to leave Alfredo because the marriage of Alfredo's sister is endangered by the scandal of the situation. Finally Violetta consents. After the elder Germont has gone she hastily leaves a note for Alfredo with the maid, and hurries away. Alfredo returns from his walk, and finding the note, is distraught. His father reenters, and tries to console him by calling back memories of his home in Provence.

Act 3.—Violetta has returned to the gay social life. At a gambling party she accidentally meets Alfredo for the first time since their separation. Alfredo pleads with Violetta to return to him. When she refuses, he denounces her bitterly before the guests. The elder Germont enters, and, rebuking his son, takes him away.

Act 4.—Violetta, in her darkened bedroom, is dying of consumption. After the doctor has come and gone, Alfredo rushes in. He has learned the true state of affairs from his father. In a rapturous love duet they plan to return to their idyllic life together. But Violetta is too weak. The excitement of seeing Alfredo is too much for her, and she dies in his arms.

BLACK HAWKS REACH PEAK FOR OPENING GAME

South Side Trials Open Thursday.

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Entries for the 10th annual Catholic Youth organization amateur boxing tournament closed last night with a total registration of more than 900. Four hundred of these entrants already have undergone physical examinations, the majority of them passing the rigid tests with colors flying. Three hundred late applicants will pass in review in C. Y. O. center tomorrow and 200 more will try to get by the examiners in Joliet next week.

The meet will open in St. Sabina gymnasium Thursday with south section tryouts. West side competition will start in St. Mel gymnasium Nov. 11, and north side trials will begin in Queen of Angels gym Nov. 14. Suburban fighting will be initiated in Catholic High school gymnasium, Joliet, Nov. 22.

Quarter-Finals Nov. 18-20. The Chicago district quarter-final matches will be held in C. Y. O. center Nov. 18, 19, and 20. Survivors in the suburban quarter-finals, which will be offered in Joliet Nov. 23, will fight Chicago's winners in semi-final engagements in the C. Y. O. Nov. 25 and 26. The 32 semi-finalists will be paired for the eight open division and eight novice class titles in the Coliseum Dec. 4.

Isaiah Wells, middleweight, is the only one of last year's eight open division champions to return for a defense of his title. All the others, except Dave Brown, light heavyweight, were forced to drop out for one reason or another. Dave, a brother of Clarence Brown, who won a C. Y. O. heavyweight championship in 1937, is back as a heavyweight challenger. Jack Ballenger, featherweight winner, has been put out of competition because of a jaw fracture suffered in a gymnasium workout.

Shift Is a Contender. The remainder of the old title holders missing from the 1940 tournament are Al Noto, flyweight; Willie Moon, bantamweight; Al Jackson, light weight; William Goldsmith, welterweight; and Cornelius Young, heavyweight. Among Brown's rivals will be James Stiff, runnerup to Young, and Joe Clemente, 1938 novice heavyweight victor.

There also will be strong contenders in other weight classes. These include Eddie O'Connell, lightweight member of the 1940 Chicago Golden Gloves intercity team; Harry Sparrow, shiftysouthpaw, who was a welterweight finalist in the C. Y. O. meet last December; Harold Dade, this year's Chicagoland Golden Gloves flyweight ruler, who was defeated by Noto in the C. Y. O. championship round last year; and Tony Baunone, runnerup to Moon as bantamweight in the 1939 tournament, and Frank Baunone, his brother, both featherweights.

PAIR PLEADS NOT GUILTY IN RACE BATTERY CHARGE

John Dellow, a jockey, and Walter Ziegler, a salesman, pleaded not guilty to charges of possession of a battery within race track premises when they were arraigned yesterday before Chief Justice James F. Hardy of the Criminal court.

Dellow's attorney, Louis Gould, entered a motion to suppress evidence on the ground that it had been obtained thru illegal search. Race track attendants had reported taking a battery from Dellow's pocket in the jockey room at Sportsman's Park, where he was arrested on Oct. 22 by special track police headed by Tom Kelly.

Judge Farley set Nov. 12 for arguments and said that Ziegler's case will be disposed of after Dellow's.

Wisconsin Faculty Votes Against Rose Bowl Plan

Madison, Wis., Nov. 4 (Special).—The University of Wisconsin faculty today voted against a proposal to limit the annual Rose Bowl game to the Western and Pacific coast conferences for a period of three years. The proposal was placed before the faculty by the university athletic board, of which Dr. William F. Lorenz is chairman.

Buddy Ryan Seriously Ill; Blood Donors Are Sought

William (Buddy) Ryan, who was a prominent welterweight boxer from 1900 to 1905, last night was in a serious condition in St. Francis hospital, Evanston. Ryan, 58 years old, was taken to the hospital a week ago. Blood donors were being sought by Mrs. Ryan and Dr. R. J. Pullman.

In the Wake of the News

BY ARCH WARD.

THE Pennsylvania game established a new record at Michigan for day-of-the-game sales. . . . The cash handled at the windows that afternoon amounted to $45,000. . . . Bruce Smith, Minnesota's brilliant left half back, has something of a forward passing record when you consider he plays on a team that doesn't specialize in aerial maneuvers. . . . Prior to the Northwestern game Saturday he had thrown nine times, completed five, and three of the successfully executed tosses went for touchdowns. . . . Harry Krause, who recently lost his life in an automobile accident in San Francisco, set a big league pitching record with the Athletics in 1909 and it stood unchallenged for 30 years. . . . He won his first 10 major league games, six of which were shutouts. . . . The 10 game feat was eclipsed in 1939 by Alcy Donald, then a Yankee freshman. . . . Duke University football followers are none too happy about the transfer of Dick Zimmerman, a sophomore tackle, to Ohio State. . . . Rene Cyr of Montreal, who will ride in Chicago's six day bicycle race, speaks no English. . . . Teamed with Torchy Peden, he finished second in the recent grind at Montreal. . . . Milt Aron's defeat by Mike Kaplan last week cost him a prospective welterweight championship bout with Fritz Zivic at Chicago Stadium this winter. . . . Eugene Black, whose real name is Stackovich, a pitcher purchased by the White Sox from the Lubbock, Tex., team, once struck out 23 batters in a semipro game. . . . He started out as a first baseman, but he couldn't hit, so he decided to put his powerful throwing arm to good use. . . . The major leagues as yet have asked no concessions from the draft board regarding deferment of military training for players. . . . Corby Davis of Indiana, who was the starting full back on the 1938 All-Star team, which defeated the Washington Redskins, 28 to 16, will marry Miss Margaret Johnston of Wilmette, a co-ed at Indiana in his undergraduate days, on Dec. 21. . . . All tickets for the Bears' game at Washington Nov. 17 have been sold. . . . The top four teams in last season's National Hockey league ratings—Rangers, Bruins, Maple Leafs, and Blackhawks—virtually are standing pat, a most unusual confidence. . . . Detroit has pursued a different course and had 87 candidates in training camp, from which the Red Wings, the Indianapolis Capitals, and the Omaha Ak-Sarben Knights will be formed. . . . It is also reported that the Norris interests, owners of the Detroit string, have control of the Buffalo Bisons, the report following the appointment of Tiny Thompson, brother of the Hawks' Paul and former Red Wing goalie, as manager of the Bisons. . . . We don't like to chill the "Milt" (We're the) Peep's" gag, which for some reason seems rather popular, but the Notre Dame captain's name, as all should have known two years ago, is pronounced "Peep," with emphasis on the "Peep." . . . There's no point to holding the press, but the Colorado college hockey team has booked games this winter with Yale, Illinois, and Southern California.

Waldorf Praises His Team in Defeat. Altho Northwestern has won four of its last five games from Illinois, it is not taking Saturday's game in Evanston against wily Bob Zupke's legions lightly. "Illinois always has been a tough opponent for us and our scouts say the team is much stronger than its record shows," said Coach Lynn Waldorf yesterday as preparations were started for the game. Last the Wildcats show a tendency to become overconfident, Waldorf has only to recall the 1937 game when an underdog Illini team invaded Dwyer stadium and defeated Northwestern, 6 to 0, in one of the major upsets of the long series. Waldorf Lauds N. U. Line. Waldorf had only praise for the Wildcats' performance against Minnesota, a team which he regards as stronger than the 1936 eleven which the Purple defeated, 6 to 0. He paid special tribute to the line which outlasted the huskier Gopher forwards. The stellar play of such backs as Red Hahnsteyn, Don Clawson, and Tuffy Chambers also was mentioned. As in previous games this season, the Wildcats again displayed an ability to punch over touchdowns when in scoring position. They have capitalized on every scoring opportunity in the five games this season.

WILDCATS GUARD AGAINST TAKING ILLINOIS LIGHTLY

Squad in Good Shape. The Wildcats hope to regain the full services this week of Bill DeConovont, half back, and Jim Smith, end, both of whom have been hampered by sprained ankles for two weeks. Altho these two veterans saw limited action against Minnesota neither was at top form. DeConovont sustained his injury in the Wisconsin game two weeks ago. He carried the ball but once against Minnesota. Northwestern emerged from the Minnesota game in good physical condition. Joe Lokanc, guard, sustained a charley horse in his right leg, but the injury is not expected to prevent him from taking his regular place in the starting lineup.

ILLINOIS LOSE PHILLIPS. Champaign, Ill., Nov. 4 (Special).—Exhorting Illinois players to forget about their bad breaks against Wisconsin and look toward the Northwestern game, Coach Bob Zupke ordered a long signal drill. Despite the defeat, Zupke found some encouraging points, such as the passing offense which gave the Illini a majority of first downs. Loss of Jim Phillips, regular right end, was confirmed. Phillips suffered a broken collar bone, thus ending his collegiate career. He is a senior. Bob Gibbs, a junior, replaced Phillips.

Phillips follows his companion regular end, Bob O'Neill, to the bench. O'Neill was injured on the first play at Michigan. Zupke apparently was well fortified at end that he was able to move Paul Milosevich to the back field but now uses him as alternate for either Gibbs, or Elmer Engel, a sophomore. Art Marlaire, another sophomore wing man, is still crippled and probably will not be ready for Saturday.

Sonia Henie Takes Stand to Deny She Owes $92,000

New York, Nov. 4 (Special).—Sonia Henie, skating star and motion picture actress, took the stand today before Justice Aron Steuer and a jury in Supreme court to contest the $92,000 suit brought against her by Dennis R. Scanlan, promoter of St. Paul, Minn. Under direct examination by her attorney, Lowell Waldmond, Miss Henie denied that Scanlan had helped her to obtain motion picture contracts in this country.

PLAYER OR COACH, ANDY PUPLIS IS A STEADY WINNER

BY JAMES SEGRET.

The townspeople of Maywood, the little suburb which lies only 12 miles directly west of Chicago's loop, will much into polling places this morning with the hope they can find the name of Andrew Puplis on the ballot. Surely, they believe, there should be an office for the very successful Proviso High School football coach, who already has brought the Maywood eleven at least a share of the 1940 Suburban league football championship. Victory after victory marks each chapter in the story of Puplis, and the start of that long trail can be picked up 'way back in 1931, when he performed in the back field of Bob Dougherty's mighty Harrison Tech squad, which rated as one of the greatest in the Public School league's football history. Puplis' partner in touchdown production that season was Andy Pilney. They formed the Andy to Andy combination, which clicked successfully with the aid of fine blocking by Steve Remias and Frank Leonard. The two Andys enrolled at Notre Dame. Harris Signs '41 Contract to Boss Senators

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4 (P).—Stanley (Bucky) Harris signed a new one year contract today to manage the Senators for 1941, terminating reports that he might succeed Oscar Vitt as pilot of the Cleveland Indians. "I had always hoped that Harris would be back with the Washington club for next season and I am proud to announce it," said President Clark Griffith. Terms of the contract were not made public but it was indicated that Harris received a raise. MCCARTHY TO GET CONTRACT. New York, Nov. 4 (New York News).—Despite the fact he finally managed not to win a world championship this year, Joe McCarthy is being rewarded with another contract, it was revealed by Ed Barrow, Yankees' president, today. Returning from a southern vacation, Barrow said he has received McCarthy's verbal agreement on a salary figure. McCarthy has been getting $35,000 on the three year contract just expired. Signing will take place this winter, inaugurating McCarthy's second decade as Yankees boss.

Michigan, Minnesota at Full Strength for Crucial Game

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 4 (Special). Michigan's undefeated football men today began preparations for the grueling Western conference stretch drive which includes successive battles against Minnesota, Northwestern, and Ohio State. With Capt. Forest Evashevski having been spared an operation by a last minute decision on the part of team physicians, it appears certain that the Wolverines' first eleven will start Saturday's Brown Jug game with Minnesota in Minneapolis.

Dave Nelson, right half, who suffered a leg injury in the Penn game, returned to heavy work today and will alternate at right half back thru the week with Tippy Lockard, a sophomore. Coaches Fritz Crisler and Bennie Dosterbauer returned yesterday from Evanston, where they watched the Gophers protect their undefeated record against Northwestern. Both agreed there was little to choose between the two teams and that Michigan is in for a hard game.

Crisler divided today's practice session between offense and defense, but is undecided whether to risk another scrimmage this week. An injury to a key man at this point in the schedule would be doubly serious. Ticket Manager Harry Tillotson reported the local office has sold 5,500 tickets for the Minnesota game. GOPHERS IN GOOD SHAPE. Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 4 (Special).—Despite the grueling struggle with Northwestern, Minnesota's players reported for practice today in good shape. Heide Fukema, reserve guard, suffered slight injuries to his left leg, but he'll be ready by Saturday. Others had minor bruises. Today's workout was limited to study of pictures of the Northwestern game and a light limbering up on the field. The hard practice grind for Michigan will start tomorrow. The rush for tickets is growing in intensity. There were 7,000 seats in the concrete and 12,000 in the temporary stands still available when today's sale started.

At San Francisco, Cal.—Sammy Angoit drew with George Laika, (10). At New York—Charley Gomer beat George Zengara, (8).

JIMMY WILSON'S IN TOWN; CUBS TALK FINANCES

Jimmy Wilson, who discarded his coaching role to catch for the Cincinnati Reds in the recent world series, arrived in Chicago yesterday and immediately became a rumored candidate for the management of the Cubs. Wilson's appearance dovetailed with a special meeting held in the Cub's office, thus giving credence to the report, but P. K. Wrigley, president-owner of the club, later insisted the conference was one among directors and involved only financial matters. "I called the directors together to get the club's money affairs shaped before taking up 1941 plans," said Wrigley. He added that it might be necessary for the club to negotiate a loan. The forward setup will find March working at right wing on one line with two of last year's finds, Center Bill Carse and Left Wing George Allen; Cully Dahlstrom at center on another setup with Doug Beutler at left wing and either Pep Kelly or Phil Hergeshelmer at right. Kelly, who was once with the Hawks on a loan basis, is now their full fledged property, and his speed and courage will do the team no harm. The third line has Bill Thomas at center, wily Bob Carse and Johnny Chad at the wings.

MANAGER CALLS SEXTET BEST IN SEVEN YEARS

Meet Americans in Stadium Thursday.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

President Roosevelt and Mr. Wilek have gone out on precarious ledges these last few months. Their campaigns end today. A pleasant young man whose career only began Thursday night and then doesn't end until April clambered out on a corner of his own yesterday and avowed that his team is the best hockey troupe Chicago has seen in seven years. This brash person is Paul Thompson, manager of the Chicago Blackhawks, who open their season Thursday evening in Chicago Stadium against the New York Americans.

This appears to be a bold preface on the part of Manager Thompson, for there is still a regulation season of 48 games to play, not to mention that interesting little score known as the Stanley cup series. Of course, the team on which Thompson was basing his comparison as the Hawks opened their 1940-41 season with a two hour workout yesterday afternoon in the Stadium (with plenty of ice) was that of the 1933-34 whirl, when they won the Stanley cup from the Detroit Red Wings in three games out of four.

That Spiritual Drive. Yes, Thompson admitted, the Hawks did win the Stanley cup again in the interval, but that came from the now historic spiritual drive that brought them from a dark horse rating to victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs in 1937-38. The points he made yesterday were that the present outfit is as good as the 1933-34 club, and has the added advantage of strong reserves in minor league clubs, all subject to immediate recall in emergencies. In their workout in the Stadium the Hawks appeared at their peak form of the training season.

Out of that 1933-34 team only three Blackhawks remain. One is Thompson himself, one of the main factors in the speedy triumph of that season. Another is Johnny Gottselig, acknowledged the greatest puck-magger of modern times, who is now in his thirteenth season as a Blackhawk, and Thompson plans to use him only sparingly, probably as the sixteenth man, since league rules permit only fifteen hands to get into the uniforms. The third old timer is Harold (Duke) Baunone, a durable little man who came to the Hawks only a few weeks after Gottselig, the man who beat the Wings in a 90 minute game for the cup on the night of April 10, 1934, and who is still a valuable player to have around on any evening.

Rough Mobs Still Operating. A manager of two of the old school boys cannot be identified as the nucleus of a hockey team that intends to go places, especially with such rough mobs as the Boston Bruins, the Wings, the Maple Leafs, and the New York rangers are operating. Thompson's hopeful premise is founded on the fact that he has a proper admixture of veterans and last year's rookies for the recipe that earns the Stanley cup.

Before going into Thompson's roster for a manager might be well to point out that he has seven men in two minor league clubs upon whom he can call at any time, particularly in case of injuries. One is Sam Lo Presti, the young goalie who gave Paul Goodman a fight for his job in the training season in St. Paul, Minn., when ice could be had, which it wasn't for the first five days. Lo Presti is now doing duty in Kansas City, but may be expected to appear before Chicago audiences before the season is over. The other six newcomers—John Mariucci, Dave McKay, Max Bentley, Bill Mosienko, Wings Johnston, and Paul Plat—were all stationed in Providence, R. I.

Goodman in the Nets. Goodman, who did such noble work after he came to the Hawks about New Year's day last season, will continue as the Hawks' net minder. The little man whose quiet demeanor off the ice has earned him the name of Playboy caught the fancy of Hawk clients from the night he first appeared. He looks ready for another good year. Immediately in front of him at defense will be big Earl Seibert and the hard working Art Wiebe, who went into yesterday's opening Stadium drill with 12 stitches in various portions of his physiognomy, the result of training workouts and the three skirmishes with the St. Paul Saints, champions of the American association. Following Seibert and Wiebe in the defense toll will be Big Jack Portland and equally large Joe Cooper.

ONLY A MIRACLE CAN STOP BEARS, SAYS LAMBEAU

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.
Curley Lambeau, dapperly dressed in a blue suit and tie, yesterday awaited a speaker's engagement, studied the National Football League schedule, reflected on Sunday's battle at Wrigley field and wondered where he could find one first class miracle.

A miracle, the dapper Green Bay coach believes, is about all that will keep the Chicago Bears from winning the western division title and the world championship. After whipping his Packers, 14 to 7, before a record breaking crowd of 45,434 Sunday, the Bears trek to Detroit this week, tackle Washington in the capital the following Sunday and finish with Cleveland and the Cardinals. The Packers, too, have four games left and if they win them all, the Bears must play only 300 ball between now and Dec. 1 to tie for the division title.

Praises Spirit of Bears.
"Teams like the Bears don't play 300 ball," Lambeau said, regretfully. "They are the finest team we have met in a long time and they got that way chiefly through their spirit. They are exceptionally well coached, have a superb personnel and a splendid offense, but all these essentials to great football do not constitute an insurmountable obstacle to opponents if it wasn't for the spirit the Bears have shown all year. They beat us on it at Green Bay and they gave it to us again Sunday because they want to win, are determined to win and are all willing to win the hard way."

"Their alertness on defense was a revelation. We had half a dozen plays designed especially for that game and the Bears broke up every one. That was nothing but alertness born of a will to win. We might just as well have had them sit in our lectures."

Stydahar—What a Man!
Lambeau was especially impressed with Bobby Stydahar and Joe Stydahar. Stydahar, he said, did more to beat the Packers than any other Bear. "Four times he broke up special formations designed to take care of him and each time we had two men assigned to keep him out," said the Green Bay coach. "And we didn't ask any of our clubhouse boys to block him. We picked a couple of big fellows we think are pretty good line-men. But Stydahar barged right through them to wreck the play. He unquestionably is one of the greatest tacklers ever to play football."

With this praise ringing in their ears, the Bears bled becomingly, then settled down to prepare for the Detroit game. Detroit tried to get along Sunday against Cleveland without its big blocking back, Fred Vanzo, and took a 20 to 0 thumping. Vanzo was back Sunday and with the psychology all favoring the Lions, Coach George Haas immediately began fearing Detroit.

Cards Meet Packers.
The Packers came back to Chicago Sunday to meet the Cardinals, who spent last week scouting Green Bay in the Bear game. The last time the Cardinals scouted an opponent in a body was at Green Bay, where they watched the Bears. Then the south siders whipped the Bears, 21 to 7. Most of the Cardinals' cripples will be back by Sunday and they are preparing to come up with their regular football night surprise in Comiskey park.

Washington, which toyed with Pittsburgh, 37 to 10, Sunday, moves into Brooklyn this week seeking its eighth consecutive victory. Brooklyn received a surprise, 10 to 7, at the hands of the New York Giants Sunday and probably will be sufficiently stung to put forth its greatest effort.

Redskins Lead in Statistics.
Traveling at a record breaking pace in pass completions, pass efficiency, and scoring, the Redskins are far ahead of the other league teams in all round offensive efficiency.

Figures indicating the eighth week of play show the Redskins have gained 2,339 yards, have completed 93 out of 148 passes for a 62 per cent efficiency, and have registered 204 points. Green Bay, second in ground gaining, is 205 yards behind Washington. The Packers also are second in scoring, but trail by 60 points, and are second in pass efficiency with a 42 per cent average.

The best defensive units are the New York Giants, the Chicago Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Player Pupils, Coach Pupils— They Both Win

to lead Crystal Lake, Ill. High school that season and his team won the Northeast conference championship. Crystal Lake repeated in 1939, and last spring Pupils moved to Providence to take over Proviso's squad, which was coached by Coach Kassel, who captained the University of Illinois eleven in 1926.

Look Out, Oak Park!
Proviso's eleven started out this fall with little hope that it could replace Oak Park as suburban league champion, but the team went through its practice schedule without defeat. Then Proviso whipped Waukegan, Morton, and New Trier for its first three victories in league competition. Last Saturday, Evanston, conqueror of Oak Park, visited Maywood. Proviso spread its way to a 21 to 0 triumph over Evanston and became assured of at least a tie for the title. Oak Park now remains as Proviso's lone opponent on the path to an undisputed championship.

The statistics reveal the strength of Proviso's squad. In those 33 points and its goal line was crossed only once. If you ask the folks in Maywood to name Proviso's outstanding players they will quickly say Bobby Schulz, right half back, who ran forty-eight yards for a touchdown against Evanston; Glen Johnson, left half back, and Gene Matwewicz, tackle. And they'll add that Andy Pupils will have another great welcoming committee to greet Oak Park Saturday afternoon in Oak Park stadium.

APOLSKIS AND VOSBERG READY FOR MANHATTAN

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 4 (Special).—The university's football team will be ready to be optimistic today as it prepared for its first invasion of New York City and its game with Manhattan college in Yankee Stadium Saturday.

Indications from training headquarters were that Marquette would be at its best strength since the opening game with Wisconsin. Ray Apolskis, center; Don Vosberg, end; Jack Peller, tackle, and Bill Phillips, quarterback, have recovered from recent injuries.

Ted Tunis, senior guard, was the only casualty in the Duquesne game. He received a back injury, but it apparently is not as serious as was first believed.

MANHATTAN BATTERED.

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Manhattan's coach, Herb Kopf, said most of this week's practice would be devoted to offense and to developing reserves to relieve the tired regulars in Saturday's encounter with Marquette. The Jaspers have been battered in losing three straight games but have suffered no serious injuries.

ILLINOIS' RACING IN '40 SURPRISES EVEN ILLINOIS

BY HOWARD BARRY.
Illinois horse racing has just come through one of the most critical seasons in its history—and it has come through handsomely, one might add. Last spring general gloom prevailed over the prospects for the sport in the middle west. New York had passed its pari-mutuel law and it was widely believed that the fortunes reaped by the eastern tracks would mean big purses that would lure all the good horses away from this section. As a result, it was thought, Chicago racing fans would lose interest, attendance and betting would drop off, and the situation would go from bad to worse.

But look what happened. Chicago race tracks refused to retreat. They got the good horses and the public went to see them. As a result, this section enjoyed its biggest season since 1929 from the point of view of attendance, mutual handle, and presentation of the leading horses of the various divisions.

East Learns About West.
In mutual handle, Arlington Park led with $11,765,307, which was $2,829,825 above the 1939 figure. Washington Park totaled $11,162,423, as against last season's $8,714,668. Hawthorne showed a remarkable increase despite the fact that it didn't have Labor day this year. This track handled $9,202,434. Its 1939 season's figure was $5,894,672. Sportsman's Park's handle was $5,932,579 in 24 days, whereas it totaled only $3,365,449 in a 30 day meeting last year. Lincoln Fields showed only a slight gain, the 1940 figure being $4,569,781 against $4,470,648 in 1939.

The easterners have no reason to look patronizingly on the Chicago area horses this season. Away last spring, Calumet farm's Whirlaway was running at Lincoln Fields. He went on to campaign at Arlington Park. He did all right in this area without making much of a name for himself. Then he went down east and won some of the most fashionable events in that section.

Misty Isle Shows 'Em, Too.
Shot Put, strictly a Chicago product, went down to Belmont park and captured the $50,000 distance event at Belmont Park after he had turned up for it by developing his route running ability in this area. He has been one of the regulars around here for the last two seasons and nobody paid much attention to him until he began to show greater supremacy as the distances were increased. This ex-ploter established quite a reputation for himself around here and made the east sit up and blink when he ran away with the $50,000 event at Alfred G. Vanderbilt's track.

Misty Isle, Joseph E. Widener's speedy juvenile filly, is another product of the middle west to distinguish herself in the east. She went down to Delmont Park and took the Matron stakes in convincing fashion. Misty Isle's stablemate, Roman, built up a reputation of being one of the country's greatest sprinters during his campaign at Arlington and Washington Park. He too went to Belmont and won the Jerome handicap.

Ducks, Too, Hold Election; Vote for New Decoys

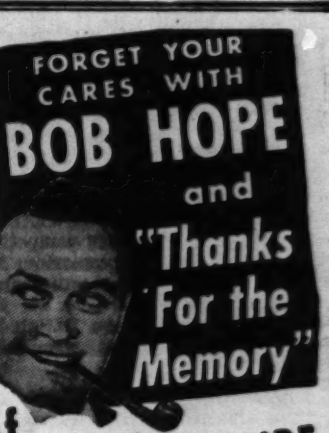

BY BOB BECKER.

Judging by the behavior of the pin-tail and mallard ducks which we saw along the lower Illinois river a couple of days ago the birds are not going to the polls today. They thoughtfully held their election when we were on the river and voted the shiny new decoys in front of our blind as perfect examples of imitation birds. It has been several years since we have seen the sprigs or pintails swarm around decoys as they did during the days we were in the marsh.

Our decoys (composed partly of white decoys painted blocks and the balance mallards) were placed in three locations in the course of our day in the marsh. The sprigs followed us around as if they didn't want to stay very far away from the attractive imitation ducks. Altogether the day was bright and warm, what the duck hunters call blue bird weather, it apparently was made to order for the pintails. From early morning until late afternoon the long-necked sprigs flew up and down the ditches above the smartweed, spotted our decoys and usually gave us a swing.

The birds cut across our decoys from all angles which added spice to the shooting and gave us splendid chances to miss birds we were sure would be dropped. Some of the streamlined pintails which swept over us down wind were going so fast that we must have punched the air about three feet behind them.

Nearly every year a duck hunter who spends a number of days in the marshes has the right to expect an unforgettable day—a day when the birds just keep on the move and decoy continuously. Our experience with the sprigs was like that.

WILDCATS PROVE GOPHER TACKLES ARE VULNERABLE

Harmon and Westfall Will Aim at 'Em Saturday.

Games Saturday

Illinois at Northwestern.
Michigan State at Indiana.
Iowa at Nebraska.
Michigan at Minnesota.
Wisconsin at Columbia.
Purdue at Fordham.
Notre Dame vs. Navy at Baltimore.
Marquette at Manhattan.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
Minnesota's game with Northwestern provided for the first time since the opening non-conference games an opportunity to check on the improvement of the Gopher tackles. It is an inescapable conclusion after watching the Wildcats riddle the Minnesota line in a brilliant eighty yard march to the touchdown which provided a chance to tie the score that Minnesota's tackles fell below opinion established after the rout of Iowa 10 days ago.

Dick Wildung, hailed as the sophomore tackle prospect of the year, already has lost the starting assignment to Fred Vant Hull. Urban Odson, who plays defensive left tackle, shares that assignment with Ed Lechner. These four—judged solely by comparison of their work against Northwestern with that against Washington more than a month ago—are going to have difficulty stopping the sharp line plunges of Bob Westfall with the threat of Tom Harmon's slashing drives and sweeping runs in Saturday's game in Minneapolis.

Unpredictable at Best.
Michigan's attack is based on good blocking, of course, but the Wolverines' defense which stopped Pennsylvania is another factor in discussion of possibilities of the Minnesota-Michigan game.

By this time, however, with such an example as the Notre Dame-Army game which defied prediction, it should be apparent that successive games can not fall into the same pattern. For that matter, you may have an argument immediately over such a simple proposition as the rest period Michigan had last week. Minnesota doubtless will say that the rest benefits the Wolverines. Michigan probably hopes that the break in the continuity of games does not dull the timing of its attack.

A Minnesota Argument.
Minnesota's best explanation, if it has not been made already, for Northwestern's eighty yard drive to its second touchdown will be that key men in the first team line were out of the game. It is true that Coach Bernie Bierman did take out at least three after the Gophers had gone ahead, 13 to 6, at the start of the fourth period. Bob Fitch, left end; Bill Kuusisto, left guard, and Odson, tackle, returned. They were ineligible to come back in the third quarter after leaving in that period.

However, at the same time Joe Lokane, Northwestern guard, and Al Bauman, left tackle, returned to the lineup. In other words, the Wildcats also had two of their starting linemen on the sidelines. Moreover, Minnesota used at least two men at each position except right half and this was presumed to be an advantage. Northwestern went thru the bitterly fought battle with three guards, Lokane, George Zorich, and Nick Burke; three tackles, Bauman, Corne Aarts, and Leon Cook, and Paul Himmels played 60 minutes at center.

Gophers Missed Opening.
Possibly the most serious indictment of the Minnesota team is failure to capitalize on a scoring opportunity in the final period. It is true, of course, that the Gophers led, 13 to 12, and could win by protecting that advantage. It also is true that following the penalty on Northwestern for clipping Bill Johnson, the Wildcats punted from the end zone and the Gophers had possession on the Northwestern 35 yard line after George Franck returned the ball ten yards.

Certainly Minnesota had the whip hand, but following a five yard punt for time out, the Minnesota attack lost two yards before Franck's fourth down kick. The Wildcats' aggressive defensive performance in the fourth period crushed Minnesota's offense. Again, however, it should be noted that the Gophers had a perfect explanation in their one point lead which eventually became a victory.

Joe Schenk Is Winner of Baltimore Handicap

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 4 (AP).—Joe Schenk, Herbert M. Woolf's consistent 5 year old sprinter, won the Baltimore autumn handicap and $2,665 at Pimlico today with a stretch sprint that carried him home ahead of a field of highly trained horses.

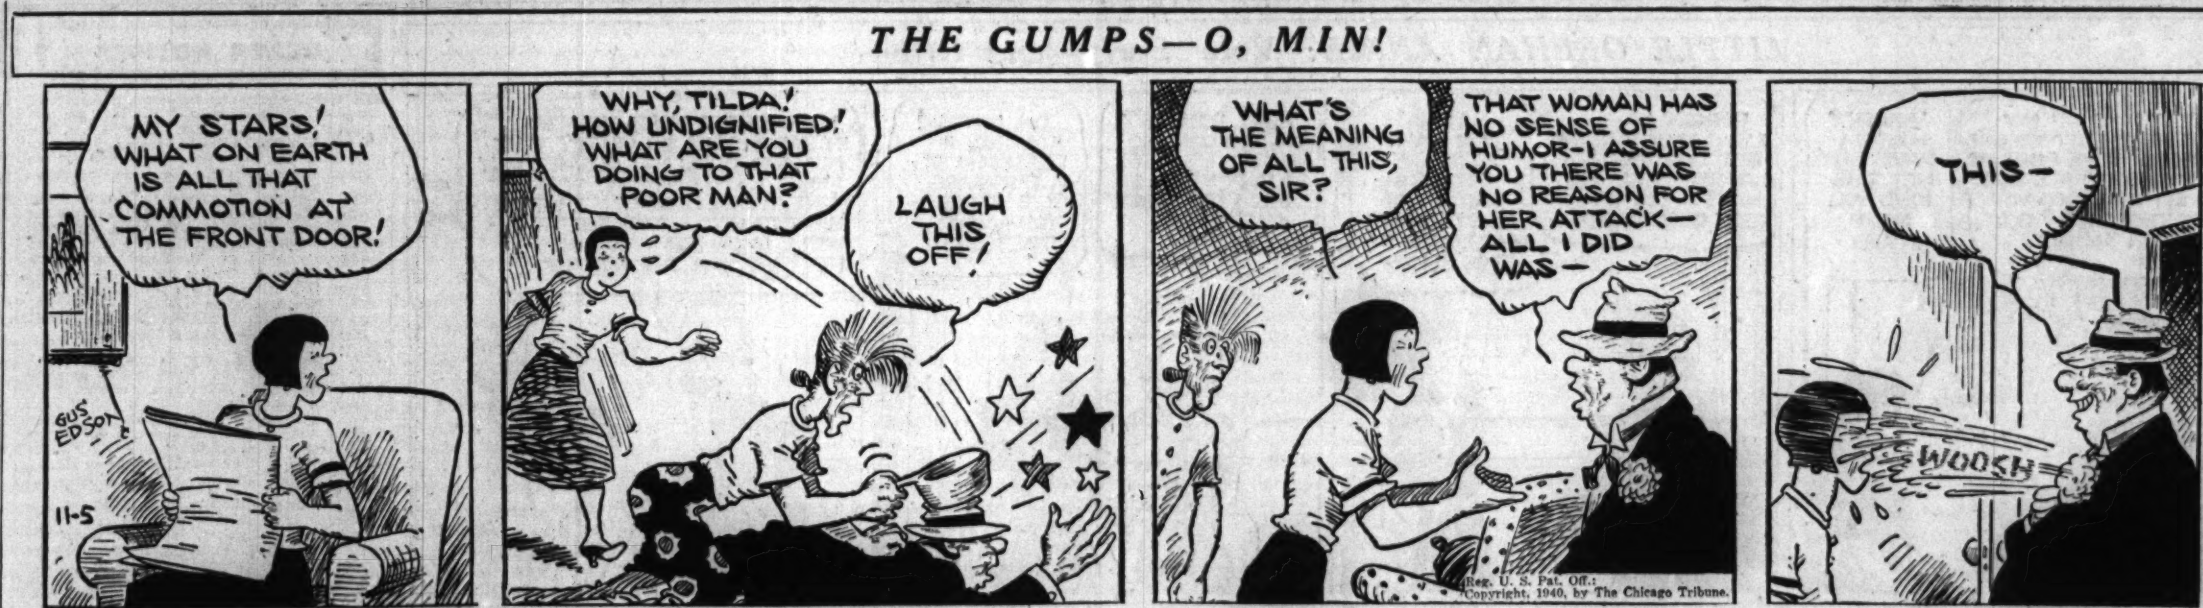

Winning by a length and a half over George D. Widener's Birch Rod, Joe Schenk repaid his backers at $23.10 for $2. Jay Jay was third.

Johnston Accepts Terms for Simon-Toles Contest

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Manager Jimmy Johnston announced today he had accepted terms for the Simon-Toles fight for a 10 round bout in Detroit's Olympia on Nov. 22 with Roscoe Toles, Detroit heavyweight. The fight would be under the promotion of Mike Jacobs, who is also trying to arrange a bout on the same card between Al Nettlow and Young Kid McCoy, Detroit welterweights.

South Shore High Defeats Hyde Park Reserves, 12-7

South Shore High school's football team yesterday handed Hyde Park's reserves their first defeat of the season, 12 to 7, in South Shore stadium. Joe Wiel and Ray Klopsch scored for the winners in the first and second periods.

PIEPUL, HURT AGAIN, BACK ON DOUBTFUL LIST

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 4 (Special).—Capt. Milt Piepul, Notre Dame full back, whose side injury was aggravated in Saturday's 7 to 0 victory over Army, was placed on the doubtful list today for this week's Navy game.

Coach Elmer Layden said he will use Bernie Crammings with the first team during the week on the assumption that Piepul may be out until the Iowa game here Nov. 16.

There was no practice today, but the players studied their mistakes of Saturday thru movies. After pointing out various individual errors, Coach Layden informed the squad that it will have to undergo a transformation or be beaten at Baltimore. The Middles' improved record this year accurately reflects the class of the team, scouts reported. "They have two fine sets of backs this year where last year, because of injuries, Navy had only two or three really good backs available for our game," Assistant Coach Chet Grant said.

5 NAVY REGULARS RETURN.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 4 (Special).—Navy's football machine will be much better fortified when it faces Notre Dame in Baltimore stadium this Saturday, than against Penn last Saturday.

Five regulars who have been favoring injuries for a week or more, will be ready for action, according to reports from the infirmary today as the squad began a hard drive for the game. These are Ken Steen, outstanding left tackle; Willis Maxson, regular right end; Johnny Harrell, powerful blocking quarter back, and his understudy, Phil Hurt, also a fine blocker, and Phil Gutting, first string back. None of the group broke into the Penn game.

FOUR HOOSIERS CRIPPLED.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 4 (Special).—Indiana's football squad, emerging from its battle against Ohio State with a casualty list of four regulars, started preparations today for its last home appearance of the season against Michigan State Saturday.

The injured players included Archie Harris and Eddie Rucinski, regular ends; Gene White, place kicker from his battle against Ohio State with a casualty list of four regulars, started preparations today for its last home appearance of the season against Michigan State Saturday.

The Hoosiers brushed up their defensive tactics for the Spartans, who hit a new offensive peak Saturday when they walloped Kansas State, 32 to 0. Satisfied by the performance of Half Back Harry (Tuffy) Brooks in his first appearance this season, Coach Bo McMillin promoted him to the first string back field. In another lineup shift Earl Doloway replaced Dale Swihart at quarter back.

FURDUE TAKES IT EASY.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 4 (Special).—Purdue's football squad, now 25 seconds short of an unbeaten rating in the Western conference race as a result of its triumph over Iowa, turned its attention to intersectional matters.

The Bollermakers, nosed out by Ohio State in the last 19 seconds of play by Mass' much-discussed field goal, and in the last six seconds by Wisconsin's Frank Merriwell finish, will journey to New York City this weekend to meet Fordham in the rubber game of the intersectional series before winding up against Minnesota at Indiana.

Coach Mai Elward had nothing but praise for the team spirit that made possible the decisive triumph over the Hawkeyes. The Bollermakers were given only the lightest of drills today. Elward attempted to bring the squad back to physical par.

SIX BADGERS LIMP.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 4 (Special).—With two straight Western conference victories to its credit, the Wisconsin football team today began preparations for its intersectional game with Columbia University in New York Saturday.

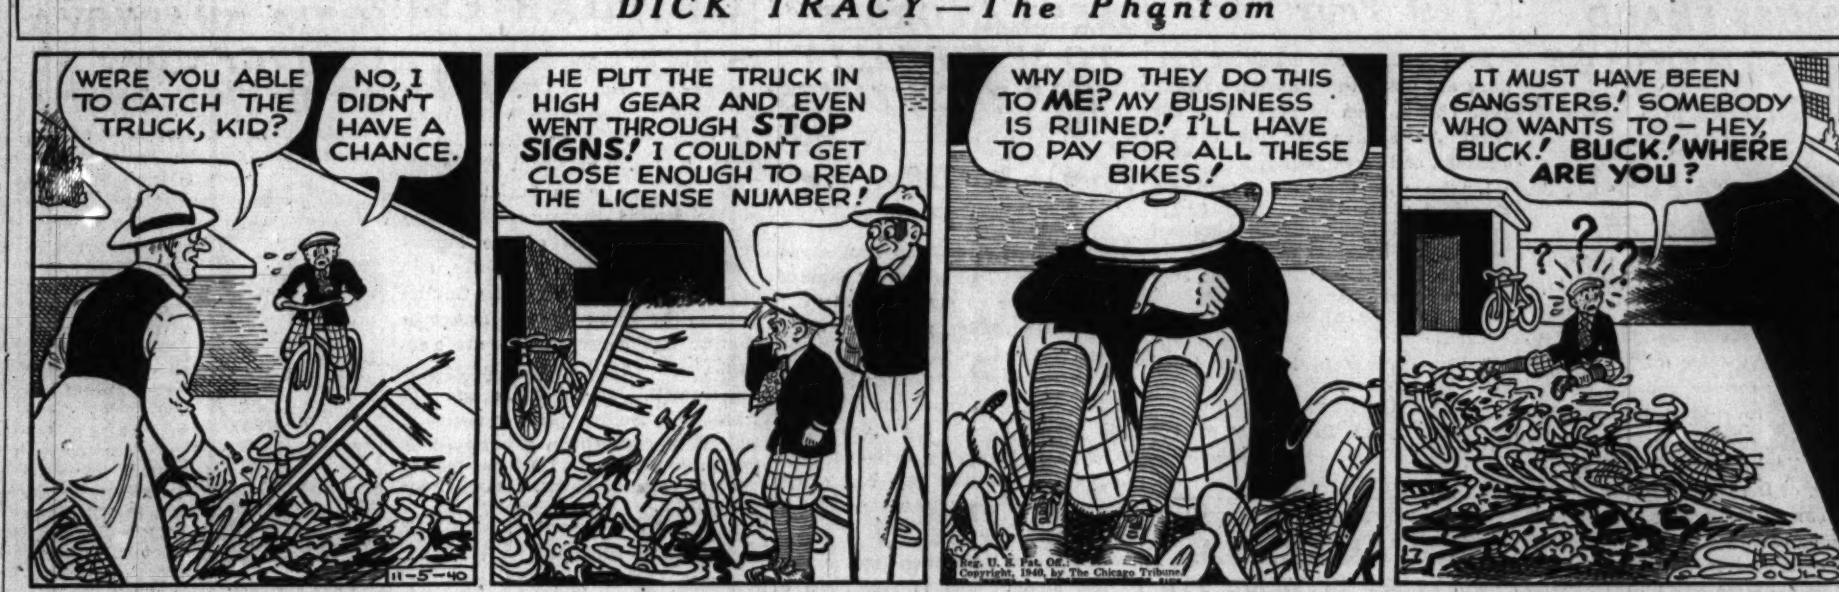

Six of the Badgers are nursing minor injuries, but none is serious. Full Back George Paskvan, who was injured in the Illinois game, still is limping from a sprained ankle, but is expected to be in condition to oppose Columbia. Other players with minor injuries are Al Lorenz, end; Mark Hoskins, half back; Dick Embick, guard, and two sophomore tackles, Dick Thornally and Lloyd Wasserbach.

Paskvan was named by Coach Stuhldreher as captain for Saturday's game.

Krauser Pins Garibaldi in Match at White City

Karol Krauser tossed Ralph Garibaldi a series of flying tackles in 27 minutes and 9 seconds in the White City arena, last night. Tarzan White, Cardinal football player, threw Dizzy Davis. Other results:

Rufus Jones downed Lefty Pacer (19:08); Rudy Kay threw Frankie Clements (22:00); Jack Moore tossed Ernie Blanton (27:04).

GRIFFITH TELLS ABOUT HARMON'S AIR APPEARANCE

Michigan's Tom Harmon got some blocking yesterday from Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics for the Western conference.

Two weeks ago the Michigan star appeared on a national broadcast. Not much was said about it at the time, but rumors started bobbing up today that he had violated a conference rule and might be declared ineligible.

"I heard about the case right after it happened," Maj. Griffith said, "but didn't say anything about it because it didn't appear important. Here are the facts: Harmon merely happened to attend this program, which was of a 'quiz' nature.

"Harmon did not show up on invitation and was not advertised as a participant. He did not violate our conference rule, which prohibits our boys from broadcasting on a sponsored program. It surely can't be said he broadcast that night."

Griffith, who said he believed the broadcast originated in Detroit, said the question "has been completely settled to the satisfaction of all conference authorities."

New York Roller Derby Skaters Cut Chicago Lead

The New York squad of roller skaters defeated Chicago last night, 13 to 12, in the Roller Derby being held in the Coliseum. New York's victory reduced Chicago's lead in the series to a point. On tonight's program Johnny Rosasco and Lou Stasiak will meet in a quarter mile sprint. Election results will be broadcast over the public address system.

The Vikings and the Swedish Americans, who played a tie game in the soccer National Challenge cup two weeks ago, will replay the match next Sunday in the Sparta Stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue. The game will start at 2:15 p. m. Eli Korer will referee.

Doug Peden Quits Hockey for Bike Racing

Doug Peden, Canadian six day bike star, who has been in Winnipeg, Canada, for the last month with the New York Ranger hockey team, has decided he can make more money as a six day bicycle rider, and has forwarded his signed contract for the Chicago race to Manager Harry Mendel. The race starts Sunday night in the Stadium at 9 o'clock.

Peden comes from Victoria, B. C., the home of Lester Patrick, manager of the Rangers. Peden reports the muscles one uses for bike riding are much the same as utilized by a hockey player, and as a result he is in excellent condition for the Chicago race. He expects to arrive in Chicago tomorrow.

Doug and Torchy Peden, his brother, may not ride as a team in this race, although Manager Mendel would like them to do so.

PUBLIC SCHOOL LEAGUE ADMITS CATHOLIC PREPS

C. W. Whitten, executive secretary of the Illinois High School association, announced yesterday that the organization had taken action at last week's meeting in Champaign to admit Catholic, private and military high schools into membership.

The action would permit these high schools to become probationary members of the I. H. S. A. A. on Jan. 1, 1941, on their own application.

Iowa Seeks to Make Amends in Nebraska Game

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 4 (Special).—The Iowa football squad set out to make reparations today after suffering three straight conference defeats. The Hawkeyes face a nonconference foe in Nebraska on Saturday in Lincoln.

Iowa's loss to Purdue Saturday was disappointing to the 40,000 homecoming fans who hoped that Iowa's undefeated home record under Coach Eddie Anderson would remain intact. There was a grain of comfort in the outcome, however, as an 18 year old sophomore left half back made good. Jim Youel, slender Fort Madison newcomer, broke into the ranks for the first time this season and played the full distance, averaging forty yards on kicks and completing five passes for 111 yards.

Iowa's defense, which has allowed four Big Nine opponents to roll thru it for 77 points, was overhauled today and more emphasis was centered on the passing attack.

NEBRASKA DISSATISFIED.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 4 (AP).—Not satisfied with their grip on the Big Six title, the Nebraska football team today polished up some new offensive maneuvers for use Saturday against Iowa here, and planned work on the center around play which proved effective against Oklahoma and still has all hands mystified.

Only casualty of the Oklahoma fray was Marvin Thompson, end, who will be benched for two weeks because of a knee injury. The Kahler brothers, Robert and Royal, were named co-captains for the Hawkeye game.

COCA-COLA TAX LOAD DOUBLED; EARNINGS FALL

Aircraft Firm Has Similar Results.

Coca-Cola company, beverage producer, set aside $11,350,000 for tax reserves during the nine months ended Sept. 30, twice as much as in the same period last year, the company's earnings report showed yesterday. North American Aviation, Inc., also reported larger provisions for increased federal taxes.

R. W. Woodruff, chairman of the board of Coca-Cola company, announced that surplus available for common stock for the September quarter totaled $5,398,717, or $1.80 a share, compared with $9,255,419, or $2.33 a share for the corresponding quarter in 1939. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, surplus for common stock amounted to $20,528,888, or $5.14 a share, against $22,397,597, or $5.61 a share a year earlier.

Plane Maker Earns Less.

Tax reserves for the nine months period last year came to only $5,685,000, Woodruff said. At the same time, he announced that the volume of operations for the September quarter and the first nine months of this year were larger than for any corresponding period of the company's history. Main offices of the company are in Wilmington, Del.

North American Aviation, Inc., airplane manufacturer, reported a net profit of $3,335,358, equivalent to 97 cents a share, for the nine months ended Sept. 30. This was after a provision of $3,010,000 for estimated federal taxes. Profit was $5,049,617, or $1.47 a share, for the corresponding period in 1939.

Indicated profit for the September quarter totaled $700,000, after a deduction of $2,384,000 for federal taxes for this period and adjustments for the two preceding quarters under the new tax law. Profit before taxes was $3,554,900. Net profit for the September quarter a year ago was $2,267,355.

Taxes Rise 50 Cents a Share.

According to the company's estimate, the new tax legislation effected a reduction in net profit for the first nine months of this year of $1,700,000, or 50 cents a share.

E. R. Breech, chairman of the board, announced that the contract for a new subsidiary airplane factory building near Dallas, Tex., had been let to James Stewart & Co., Inc., of New York City. It will cost about $7,000,000 when completed, and will have total floor space of 1,000,000 square feet.

North American, with main offices in Inglewood, Cal., has been manufacturing military aircraft since 1938, and this year began production of a new type of pursuit plane.

Truists of the Minnesota and Ontario Paper companies reported a net profit of $3,826 for nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with a net loss of $1,599,995 for the corresponding period last year.

Automobile sales in Cook county totaled 10,298 last month, establishing a record for October, the Bureau of Motor Advice reported yesterday. The previous October peak was reached last year when 7,397 were sold. The bureau is a semiofficial agency which bases its figures on new car registrations at Springfield.

Sales during September amounted to 5,424. For the 10 months thru October they reached 105,228, topping the 97,755 total for all of 1939. The ten-month figure is the third largest ever recorded, exceeded only by the 114,189 in the corresponding period of 1937 and the 106,592 in the 1939 interval.

INSURANCE MEN DENY ROOSEVELT 'FRIGHT' CHARGES

Denials of recent charges by President Roosevelt that insurance company executives are attempting to frighten policyholders into believing the value of their policies would be endangered by his reelection were made yesterday from two sources.

Harry T. Wright of Chicago, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, said that his association of 33,000 members has taken no part in the Presidential campaign. He said he knew of no members having been coerced by their companies to take sides in the election.

Alfred M. Best, head of an insurance reporting firm, said: "No responsible insurance official has done what the President charged. Policyholders are safe, despite the difficulties created for the companies by vast governmental spending of borrowed money and other unsound and business baiting policies."

SOY BEAN SALES ABROAD REACH NEW PEAK LEVEL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4 (Special).—United States exports of soy beans, soy bean oil, and soy bean meal were the highest on record in the 1939-40 marketing season which closed Sept. 30, the department of agriculture reported today.

Exports of beans were 10,949,000 bushels, compared with 4,001,000 a year earlier. Export buying was particularly heavy in the summer and fall of 1939, because of the difficulty of most European countries in obtaining Manchurian beans.

The large export was attributed to the unusual European demand and to the record 1939 domestic crop. Because of war conditions, however, the export of beans and meal in the current season is expected to be insignificant and that of soy bean oil to be substantially below the 1939-40 level.

The towboat soon will leave for the Standard refinery at Wood River, Ill., to pick up a tow of oil barges.

COURT AFFIRMS RULING AGAINST BREWER'S HEIRS

The appellate court yesterday upheld a ruling of the Circuit court which dismissed an accounting suit brought by heirs of Otto Kubin, former president of the Atlas Brewing company, against the Chicago Title and Trust company on charges of mismanagement of the estate. The court affirmed the lower court's decision that the trust company had acted properly as trustee for the heirs.

Kubin's two sons and two daughters filed the suit in March, 1938, charging that the trust company had failed to dispose of stock in the brewing company in 1933, thus allegedly causing the estate a loss of $1,026,000. They alleged that the trustee could have sold the stock at a large profit when beer sales became legal again. Judge John Prystalski gave the Circuit court decision on Aug. 4, 1939.

In 1920 the rise was only 0.30 point, and in 1916 there was a decline of 0.35 point. The market rose 0.22 point the day after election.

Predicts National Income Will Exceed 75 Billions for Year

New York, Nov. 4 (Special).—National income produced in the United States will exceed $75,000,000,000 for the first time since 1929, the Alexander Hamilton Institute forecast today.

Last year the nation produced a total income of $69,378,000,000, while the peak year 1929 set a record of $82,585,000,000.

UTILITY LAWYER HITS SEC BAN ON BOND OFFERING

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4 (Special).—Counsel for El Paso Electric company (Texas) today assailed the Securities and Exchange commission for delaying the company's financing program and at the same time a SEC attorney charged that the utility's stock is "watered."

Reply Terms El Paso Stock 'Watered.'

William E. Tucker, counsel for the company, which operates in the El Paso, Tex., area, attacked the commission in a statement defending the proposed offering of bonds and stock which had been scheduled for last Wednesday but which was delayed by refusal of the SEC to grant clearance.

Part of Merger Plan.

The El Paso company planned to sell $5,500,000 of new 3 1/2 per cent bonds and 24,000 shares of 5 per cent preferred stock as part of a program for merging Mesilla Valley Electric company into El Paso Electric, reorganizing the latter and liquidating El Paso Electric company of Delaware. The Delaware firm is an intermediate holding company in the Engineers' Public Service company organization.

Tucker declared that the program proposed by El Paso and Engineers' Public Service company was sound and constructive and would leave El Paso with a well balanced and sound capital structure. He asserted that there was no necessity for El Paso issuing additional common stock, either for sale to the public or for purchase by Engineers as suggested by SEC counsel. If the lowest overall cost of money is to obtain, additional common stock should not be issued, Tucker said. Such action would be injurious to the company and would add an added burden on consumers, he contended.

Says Rules Were Followed.

"It is believed by the applicants," Tucker said, "that there are in this case no issues, whatever serious enough to have delayed this issue beyond the original offering date unless the whole policy of the commission with respect to the issuance of preferred stock is to be revised."

Furthermore, that policy is to be revised it certainly seems unfortunate that some rule of the commission as to future conduct after reasonable notice to the industry could not have been adopted instead of raising such an issue in a case where at great labor and expense the securities were prepared along conventional standards previously approved by this commission.

At oral arguments on the case today SEC staff attorneys recommended that El Paso Electric common stock be required to refund a substantial portion of its present securities by the issuance of common stock in lieu of new senior securities.

Declares Securities 'Watered.'

SEC Attorney Harlow B. Lester declared that El Paso's security structure was "heavily watered" and that the company as a maximum had a common stock equity cushion for its publicly held securities of only 19 per cent. The company for its own protection and for the protection of Engineers' Public Service company and its publicly held securities should increase its common stock equity by refunding a substantial portion of its securities by new common stock, Lester asserted.

He declared that El Paso Electric has an inadequate depreciation reserve, resulting in overvaluation of its assets.

At the same time the SEC staff took the position that under the so-called death sentence of the public utility holding company act Engineers' Public Service company could not retain the El Paso-Mesilla utility system.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4 (Special).—The Agricultural Adjustment administration reported today that its expenditures, including benefit payments to farmers, totaled $149,009,000 during the July-September quarter. Expenditures by states included Illinois, $9,176,912; Indiana, $3,898,198; Iowa, $4,343,538; Michigan, $1,070,987; Minnesota, $7,313,338; Ohio, $3,612,230; Wisconsin, $5,189,035.

Steel Makers Boost Output Rate to 96 Pct.

The steel industry, which already had been producing ingots at a record tonnage rate, raised its operating schedule again yesterday. Meantime the textile and other industries received stimulants in the form of a theoretical maximum. A year earlier the average was 92.5 per cent.

Near Practical Capacity.

Because repairs on furnaces and other equipment are required from time to time and mills cannot use all of their capacity indefinitely, the industry actually is operating nearer practical limits than the theoretical rate indicates, steel men said.

Some steel producers have been using obsolete equipment in an effort to meet national defense demand. The war department announced award of contracts totaling more than $44,000,000 for textiles, including flannel shirting and serge cloth.

A large part of the purchases—$5,816,000 for shirting and $5,568,300 for serge cloth—went to American Woolen company. Other mills receiving large orders were Pacific Mills, Philadelphia, and Botany Worsted Mills, Passaic, N. J.

Orders Total 66 Millions.

Other contracts totaling about $22,000,000 were announced by the war department, making a total of $66,000,000 for the day. One of the largest contracts was let to Landsdowne Machine company, Pittsburgh, a contract to equip a gun tube factory at West Homestead, Pa., on a fixed fee basis. Mesta will construct and own the building, but the government will pay for $1,680,000 of equipment.

War department contracts to Illinois companies were E. C. Rilling Brothers, Chicago, 100,000 denim working coats, $55,750, and D. L. Marx company, Cairo, 50,000 denim working coats, $41,000.

Chicago Firms Get Orders.

The following contracts were announced by the navy department: Stewart-Warner corporation, Chicago, miniature practice bombs, $33,688; Armstrong-Blum manufacturing company, Chicago, band for metal saws, $5,016.

A compilation of defense contracts valued at $500,000 or over cleared by the national advisory defense commission showed that $7,490,209,959 of such contracts were cleared between July 1 and Oct. 15.

Of the contracts, $875,197,907 were awarded in New York state, $947,174, 207 in New Jersey, and $231,134,924 in Connecticut.

SALES OF SHOE CHAINS MOUNT IN SEPTEMBER

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4 (Special).—Chain shoe store sales during September showed a daily average gain of 4.4 per cent over those of August, according to reports from more than 2,600 stores, the department of commerce reported today. Although somewhat less than the usual seasonal increase of recent years, the gain represented satisfactory improvement, the department said, because expansion occurred in August.

September sales exceeded those of a year ago by 1 1/2 per cent, after adjustment for the extra Sunday in the month this year. Average sales per store, however, declined somewhat.

The cost value of inventories held by chain shoe stores at the end of September rose approximately 4 per cent, following an expansion of 8 per cent in August. A 7 per cent rise over last year was recorded.

2 Air Lines Report Gains in October Traffic Volume

Two air transport lines yesterday reported that their passenger business last month was much larger than in October, 1939. Chicago and Southern Air Lines said the number of passengers which it carried increased 137.4 per cent. Northwest Airlines reported passenger revenues from Chicago rose 59.1 per cent.

Gen. Motors to Pay $1 on Common.

Directors of General Motors authorized a payment of $1 on the common stock, payable Dec. 12 to holders of record Nov. 14. There were 42,930,528 shares outstanding of 2 1/2 cents. Both previous distributions this year were $1 each on Sept. 12 and June 12, and 75 cents on March 12. The current declaration will bring payments for 1940 to $3.75 a share against $3.50 in 1939.

Votes Year End Special.

1935. A year end dividend of $2 a share, in addition to the usual disbursement of 75 cents, was voted by the Coca-Cola company. Payment of carbonated beverage. Payment of both on the 3,991,100 shares outstanding is scheduled for Dec. 16 to holders of record Dec. 2. These will bring total distributions for the year to $5, the same as in 1939.

Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Standard Oil Company of Indiana, which has headquarters in Chicago, announced an extra dividend of 25 cents together with the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents. Both are payable Dec. 16 on the 15,729,914 shares outstanding to holders of record Nov. 16, bringing the total for the year to $1.50, compared with $1.25 last year. The company paid 25 cents extra on Sept. 16.

An initial quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common stock was declared by the Michigan Public Service company, Traverse City, Mich. The $5,000 outstanding shares were recently offered publicly in connection with the liquidation of the Inland Power and Light corporation, which was the owner.

Debits to deposit accounts, as reported by 158 banks in 41 clearing house cities in the district, totaled $1,349,538,000, against $1,355,796,000 in the preceding week, and $1,272,360,000 last year. GRAIN FUTURES ADVANCE; SOY BEANS AT PEAK

Wheat Climbs Sharply After Early Dip.

Grain futures closed mostly higher yesterday as late buying by mills and a professional trader in the wheat market found the pit bare of offerings. Soy beans opened at new seasonal highs and extended these prices to close 1 to 2 cents higher.

Short covering caused an early rally in wheat futures. A midseason selling of the December deliveries by commission houses helped weaken the market but the late mill buying left final prices 1 to 1½ cents above Saturday. Corn closed ½ to ¾ cent ahead; oats rose ¼ to ½ cent, and soybeans the same amounts.

Red Cross Buys Wheat.

Preflection trading was slow and price fluctuations irregular until the final hour. The urge to even up trading accounts dominated the market much of the time, accounting for quiet dealings early in the session and covering of previous short sales later.

Some buying of wheat futures was credited to merchandisers lifting their hedges on grain sold to the Russian Cross. Trade reports stated that Red Cross purchased 150,000 bushels of No. 1 soft winter wheat and 100,000 bushels of No. 2 rye for shipment from Baltimore to Finland.

Corn Supplies Increase.

Corn prices were pulled up by the strength in wheat with some buying by eastern interests aiding in the upturn. Cash houses were reported selling Decembers after buying earlier most traders evening up their operations awaiting the outcome of the

The Chicago Board of Trade reported that the visible supply of corn in the United States increased 2,152,000 bushels last week, reflecting the continued movement of government-owned corn into the terminal markets.
